Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination.

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, wher the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

Harry Ormerod, long proscribed Harry Ormerod, long proscribed traitor to King George as a Stuart partisan, returning from France to London rescues Aiderman Robert Juggins from a band of assassins. Juggins proves to be the grandson of a former steward of Ormerod's father, to whom Juggins feels himself indebted. Ormerod tells Juggins he has abandoned the Stuart debted. Ormerod tells Juggins he has abandoned the Stuart cause. Juggins informs Ormerod of a Jacobite plot in the American colonies to weaken England by forwarding. by forwarding French interests. At its head is Andrew Murray, a Scotsman, and a Frenchman, De Veulle, deadly enemy of Ormerod. The two are in London furthering their schemes. Anticipating the plotters' early return to America, Jugging arranges for America, Juggins arranges for Ormerod to go there with letters to Governor Burnet, friend of Juggins, and work to foil Mur-

"'Tis Juggins," interposed my mas ter. "The lad is a cousin once re moved. He goes to seek employment in the New world. To tell the truth though strong and willing, he is not overburdened with wits. But he can swing an ax as well as anyone, and his muscles should bring him good hire on some wilderness farm. "Aye," agreed Master Jenkins tone-me indignantly. "Would you ruin us, Master Harry?" he demanded. "Zooks, you were like to plunge yourself into trouble by your forward manner! I'll wager Jenkins is wondering now whether you are a criminal or only a half-wit. Why did you flare up over this De Veulle?"

"Because I know him and I hate him," I answered doggedly.

"Thy? What hath he done?" "He is one of the gallants of the court in Paris. He came out of Canada some three years ago, and made a reputation for gambling, fickleness and daredeviltry of all kinds, but once in the Toison d'Or I heard him slur the poor young man I then served."

"I called him King James in those days," I answered. "Yes, De Veulle was mocking the petty motley of our exiled court. 'What is this king but a puppet figure for us to dandle in England's face?' he said. 'And what are his courtiers but other puppets to dress the show?'

'His toadles all laughed. " 'And the most comical thing of all,' ended De Veulle, 'is to think of this puppet king, with a puppet court. ruling over a puppet England while France pulls the strings-as will surely happen some day.' "It was then I knocked him out of his chair."

Master Juggins gripped me by the band with a warmth that surprised me. "Good lad!" he exclaimed. "I would have done it myself!" "What? You are no Jacobite!"

"I am no Jacobite," he replied in some confusion, "but no more were you a Jacobite when you struck him. 'Twas for England, Master Harry and a man's country means more than any king that ever ruled. But what came after?"

"We fought in the upper room of the Tolson d'Or-De Veulle and I and a friend of his and my friend. My friend was badly wounded."

"And you?" "I disarmed my opponent. I disarmed him several times. When we began to fence I found he knew little of the small sword-remember, he had been brought up in Canada-and 'twould not have been pretty to slay a man so at my mercy. Also, to treat him as I did was more humiliating to his pride than death.' "You did well, Master Harry, But granny will be awaiting us. We must hasten.

He walked in silence until we had reached the house in Holborn. "How comes De Veulle in London?" he asked suddenly as we climbed the stairs. "He was in some trouble in Pariswhat, I know not. The rumor was that he was ordered into exile. But if he sails for Canada, as Master Jenkins

"And on the same ship with Murray," interposed Juggins excitedly, "after appearing in Murray's behalf this afternoon-

"-then there may be more to his enterprise than the mere punishment of exile from the court," I concluded. "Tis so!" exclaimed Juggins. "Beyond doubt 'tis so. And mayhap De Veulle will recognize you." "Do you think 'my father's son' will draw back on such excuse at this hour?" I said. He laughed ruefully, and raised his hail for granny. "Ho, Goody! Here are two hungry forest-runners will eat your kitchen bare. Granny tripped into the hall, a mug of bitter ale in either hand. "I heard what you said, and Master Harry's answer, she rebuked him. Think share on yourself, Robert, to hint that he would hesitate before peril - and you sending him into it. oo," she added somewhat illogically, thought. "Now do both of you drain these. Twill wash the taste of the streets and taverns from your mouths."

We obeyed her. "And what luck did you have?" she demanded next.

"lie leaves us Saturday," sald Juggins simply.

She cried out

"So soon! Must it be, Robert? Sure, he lad should have some respite from oil and fear!"

"If he is to go, he must go then," ejoined Juggins. "'Twas because I felt as you did that I said what you heard, granny."

"And 'twas because he had a sound heart in him that he answered as he did," she snapped. "If he is to go, he should go, I dare say; and the greater he peril, the greater the reward. Have you done aught toward securing Master Harry's equipment?"

He went to the cupboard, from which he procured a bundle of rolled cloths. Layer after layer was unwound, and finally he drew from the vrappings a gun such as I had never seen before. It was long in the barel, well-stocked, yet very light and "You may exclaim over it, Master Harry," remarked Juggins as he surendered it into my admiring hands: but you can have no idea of its value antil you have seen it tested in the great forests, where a man's life depends upon the swiftness and accuracy with which he can shoot. I learned that in my own youth, and so when I returned to London I had this gun made for me by the king's own gunsmith, after plans I drew for him. There is none other like it."

"And it is for me?" I asked, deighted as a child with a new toy. "What better use could it have?" he replied. "Oh, yes; and these go with it."

He brought from the same cupboard shot-pouch of beaded deerskin an powder-horn, ornamented with dull silver that, would not catch the light. Also a belt of hide from which there hung in sheaths a delicately balanced hatchet and a long, broad-bladed knife.

"These you will discover no less useful than the gun," he explained, drawng the weapons from their coverings. This which you call a hatchet is the omahawk of the Indians, used for fighting at close quarters and for throwing. This other is the scalping knife, and a deadly blade it is, too. You will feel them strange at first, but among my friends in New York there is a Dutchman named Corlaer who will instruct you in the ways of the wilderness."

"You shall have letters to Governor Burnet himself, whom I met before he went overseas, and to Master Cadwalider Colden, the governor's surveyor general and a member of his council, fine, loyal gentleman with whom I have had some correspondence.

CHAPTER III

The Fif'h Passenger Granny Juggins drew my face down to a level with her puckered old lips. "God preserve you, Master Harry. No, I am not weeping. 'Tis- No matter. Remember always that so long as my heart beats there is room in it for you-and forget not that your mother would be hungry for pride in you if she were but with us.' She kissed me tenderly.

"I am an old woman, Master Harry." she said, "and I may not live to see it; but the day will come when you will be no longer a fugitive from jusice. So be not disheartened.'

"And how could I be disheartened," demanded, as I set her down, "with two friends such as I may boast of?" There was a mist before my eyes, and I was not sorry when Juggins roke in upon our farewells. "Aye, John Waterman will be waitng us at the Temple stairs, and we ave little time to spare if we are to et aboard before the other passengers. This De Veulle would recognize you, fear, even in this disguise.

I could not forbear a grimace at the reference to my get-up, a linsey-woolsey shirt, with homespun jacket and reeches and a bobbed scratch-wig. he whole designed to give me a rustic appearance, which there can be no oubt that it did.

"Never mind, Master Harry," adnonished Juggins as he clapped an igly beaver of ancient style upon my ead. "In New York you will rig yourself in forest-runner's garb, and forget that you ever played the bumpkin. Give granny a last kiss, and—

She flew at me, light as a bird; her arms clasped momentarily about my neck; I felt her kiss on my cheek; and hen she was gone from the room. I nay as well say here that I never saw er again, although many a night as I ay under the stars I was to remember her quaint ways, her sweet, shrill voice and loving smile.

But I had no opportunity for such houghts as Juggins and I hurried through the streets toward the river, where a wherry was awaiting us. All the way he kept up a running fire of last-minute advice and instructions.

"Guard well the letters I have given you, the one to Corlaer no less than hose to Governor Burnet and Master Colden. Corlaer, though he be only a rude, unlettered woodsman, is none the less of importance in the wilderness country. He hath the confidence of the Indians of the Six Nations, a mighty tribe, or rather confederacy of tribes, Master Harry. I have writ as strongly as a man may to Governor Burnet, but I would have you say to him all that you can think of to urge him to a vigorous course. Tis no hour for half-way measures. We must crush Murray once and for all."

We came presently to Greenwich reach, and steered a passage through the river traffic to the side of the New Venture. Master Abbot, her captain, met us at the rail.

"The young man is not sure of himself afloat, and would seek his berth," said Master Juggins, after the preliminaries had been passed.

"As he pleases," agreed Captain Abbot indifferently. "Y'are the first aboard, lad, and may choose your quarters. You may bunk with the second mate or one of the other passengers. But no," he corrected himself: "I should have said with one of two of the other passengers. The lady hath cabin to herself."

"The lady!" I exclaimed. Master Juggins pursed his lips in a soundless whistle. mented.

"Aye," replied Abbot.

"Who is she?"

"I know not." He turned to me.

"And now, young sir, what do you say? Will it be the second mate or a passenger for companion?

"The second mate," I said. He nodded his head, called a seaman to carry my luggage below and point the way, and walked off. Master Juggins drew me back to the

"'Tis best I should not wait," he said. "Stay below till you be safe out of Thames mouth, Master Harry. You should be safe enough now, but care is a sure precaution."

"I will not forget," I promised. "And one thing more, lad. Do not stint your wants for money. Governor Burnet will aid you to draw whatever you may desire through the bankers in New York. Remember, you spend on my behalf. I would willingly use all I have to thwart Murray. When all is said and done, we are at war with France. Fate has arranged a meeting for Ormerod which, though he does not at once recognize it, is to be of momentous importance in his life.

After years of dispute between and Maryland colonies, a boundary compromise was arrived at in 1760 and two English surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, were appointed to run the line. This they began in 1763, working westward for four years, by which time they carried their survey over the mountains to a point 244 miles from the Delaware river. Indian hostility made further work impossible at the time, and the line was completed later by nights and winters.

Professors in Germany who are forced onto the pension list at the age of sixty-eight, in compliance with the new federal law in effect there, are protesting bitterly that they are too young to retire. According to this edict all government officials, clerks and employees must retire at the age of sixty-eight at the latest. Many head professors who have reached the age limit feel that they are still able to keep up with their duties as well as ever. Only after considerable protest have they relinquished their administrative posts, even though they receive full pay and continue to give their usual lecture courses.
