Wheat and flour are synonymous in the minds of many. As a matter of fact, however, forty per cent of our mammoth wheat crop never leaves the farm at all, but is used for seed purposes and feeding farm animals, states the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation in a survey recently completed on wheat consumption. It is used most abundantly for feeding in those sections of the country having a wheat surplus and a shortage of the usual feed crops such as corn, oats and barley. The poorer qualities of wheat, not suited for making flour, are kept behind for this purpose.
 Chickens are the heaviest consumers of wheat fed on the farm using 59.1% of all wheat so distributed. Swine are next, with 29.1%. In wheat-growing sections horses are fed wheat and consume on an average 5.4% of all wheat fed on the farm, while the remaining 6.4% goes to cattle.

THE night was cold, bleak, and dark. "Ugh! what a beastly night to start on a long journey," said a traveler, "but it cannot be postponed. The business in hand will brook no delay."
 He shivered in his fur coat as the high wind sent him scudding along at a rapid pace to the railway station, a miserable little place, as cold and cheerless as the night. One passenger, a pretty young woman, sat on a dilapidated bench and looked about upon her and devour her. Apparently she had never traveled alone before.
 In about ten minutes the train pulled into the station and both travelers got on and went into the same car. The woman sat in front of the man. He gazed at her for a moment, then forgot all about her, so absorbed was he in thinking of "the business in hand." Presently, however, he became painfully conscious that something was wrong when he heard a half stifled cry, and looking at the woman, saw that she was sobbing.
 "What shall I do?" he thought. "She is in great distress. I may, or I may not be able to help her."
 He hesitated to speak to her, thinking she might resent what she considered impudent interference. As he sat pondering the matter, wondering what to do, the train suddenly stopped with a great jolt and the woman, affrighted, jumped up and screamed, "There! I know it would happen. We've jumped the track!" And she continued to scream and scream.

DAIRYMAN'S CALENDAR
 As a progressive Dairyman desiring to secure maximum profits from my milk herd, I realize the necessity of adhering to an organized schedule of care, feeding and handling.

Any cow in my herd suspected of being a hoarder or otherwise lacking in necessary qualifications shall undergo a fair, but thorough test. What legend on my herd must come back to me at a profit.	During the hot months, whenever possible, I shall supply my herd with a cool, clean, outside resting place, where they may chew their cuds in peace and ruminate on the blessings of being a provider rather than a parasite.
My first step should be the selection of a true type herd—a selection which should always command great care and good judgment.	A diet condition like that pictured here shall never prevail in my herd. Rather than scrape, curry and brush endlessly, I shall clip and quickly clean thoroughly by using with a damp cloth.
Proper selection of dams also will bring its own rewards in more milk, better milk and better animals.	A clean, pure, clean, plentiful feeding water at the clean drinking trough and no milk-tinged water are all part of the program when I shall enforce rigidly.
The comfort of the animal is important. Thorough cleaning aided by medical clothing about flanks, udders and under-bones during stable months and all over the body when turning out in the spring shall be part of my program. Clean animal, clean milk with low bacteria count.	The dairy or creamery that will bear my milk must be clean and sanitary as much as I do. They must carry on from the point beyond which I have no control.
The growth in the number of cow testing associations convinces me that membership in one is a good thing. I pledge my association full support and co-operation.	When my milk is bottled I shall know I am proud for my efforts. I shall get more money for my milk and more milk and more milk and more milk shall spread throughout the land.
Proper feeding is essential. Therefore I shall always provide a carefully balanced ration to my herd, as well as a plentiful supply of pure, clean water.

The few passengers in the car, mostly men, looked at her and one of them laughed.
 "Stop that laughing," commanded another one, jumping up, "or I'll break every bone in your body."
 "Oh, you will, will you?" snarled the laughing one. "Well, come on, just you try."
 "I said if you did not stop it I would."
 During this melee the woman kept screaming, "Oh, I knew it would happen. I knew it. Why did they insist upon my taking this journey?"
 The traveler, hoping to quell what promised to be a riot, cried out, "Silence, gentlemen, I beg of you, until we find out what is the matter with this lady."
 "Mind your own business," they shouted, "the lady, doubtless, is capable of minding hers."
 And they continued to argue. The battle of words was distracting. "This noise must be stopped," cried the traveler. At that moment the lights went out. This had the contrary effect to what he expected. They lady stopped screaming and the men stopped talking.
 After a few moments of intense silence the lights flashed on again and the train started. The traveler looked at the lady. Now she was composed and tranquil. The men likewise.
 "What a curious psychological problem has presented itself for my observation tonight," was the thought that flashed through his mind. "Why did that lady scream and take on so when there was no reason, apparently, and when there was, why was she composed?"
 For the moment this problem drove all thought of his business out of his mind, and in trying to solve it he sat deep in thought. Then, "Eureka! I have it. The lady, no doubt, has been reading something that made so deep an impression on her mind that it became almost an obsession causing her much mental anxiety. The thought of the possible danger if the train did jump the track assumed such gigantic proportions in her mind that all other matter was relegated to second place. So, naturally, when she was obliged to set out alone on a journey she immediately began to conjure up all sorts of dire happenings. That was why she cried. And when the train stopped suddenly with a jolt, which is a common occurrence when traveling, her mind was so overwrought she immediately imagined the worst and began to scream. But when the light went out, which was an occurrence that might, justifiably, have caused fearful forebodings, she paid no attention to it. When the real cause for mental anxiety presented itself, the unreal cause became apparent at once, and she saw how foolish she had been."
 At this moment the lady was making desperate efforts to control her mirth. But to no avail, after a short struggle it had its way and a merry laugh rang out in which everybody joined. Whereupon she said, "Fellow-passengers, I owe you an apology for causing so much disturbance. But I wish to sound this note of warning. Don't ever read a book like this," and she held it up, "before starting on a long journey. If you are sensitive it may have the same effect on you that it had on me. It is responsible for what might have been a great misfortune, but, happily, turned out all right."
 All the passengers crowded around her to see the book. It was entitled "The Railroad Wreck." Again the car resounded with hearty laughter.
 And now comes the most interesting part of this story. As a result of that chance encounter the lady and the traveler, Matthew Blaine, Esq., came to the wise conclusion that this world would be a dreary old place to live in if they did not share and another's joys and sorrows.
