This Thrifty Home Brings Joy to the Rent-Wearry

FOR THE family of four or five there is this attractive two-story, six-room house of beveled siding and slate or shingle roof.

One of the interesting features of this house is that every room has a double exposure, while the living room has three sides exposed. Extra windows not shown in the plan may at slight expense be added at either end of the living room. While this type of house affords the utmost in light and cross-ventilation, it would be well to protect it against the extremes of cold and heat by insulation with celotex for the walls and roof. Such insulation will also cut down outside noises to a marked degree, as in addition to its insulating property, celotex is an efficient sound deadener. The living room has the much desired open fireplace and cleverly arranged bookshelves flanking the entrance to the dining room. The sun porch may be put either to the side or the back of the house, according to the builders' wishes or to conform to the demands of the lot.

"Old Glory" was Appreciated

Sight of Flag Restored
Lost Hopes of Life

(William A. Lloyd of Sydney, Australia)

In the course of my work as a newspaper correspondent in the near east it became necessary for me to visit certain parts of Asia Minor. While on shore at Dirindje, Ismid, I was surprised and delighted to meet an old friend—a Greek priest whom I had long thought to be dead. His coat, once black, was now green with the rays of many summers. His hands were hard with toil.

And this is the story the old priest told me:

A band of brigands had one day descended upon his village. There was the usual scene of massacre and outrage. Together with a remnant of his little flock he had escaped. For days they had wandered, footsore and weary, living on herbs and the leaves of trees. Some of them died by the way. At last some of them refused to go any farther. The old priest reasoned with them and told them of the sufferings of the Man of Sorrows, but they would not listen to him. "There is no Christ," they said. "He is dead and it is better that we die too and end all our misery."

Just then a wonderful thing happened. The old priest saw an automobile approaching and on its radiator was an American flag. In the car was a party of near east relief workers. He pointed to it and with tears streaming down his face cried: "See, my children, he is not dead. Christos anesti—Christ is risen!"

When the weary wanderers understood what had happened and knew that they were saved, they fell upon each other's necks and sobbed: "Alithos anesti—He is risen indeed!"
