One Traffic Trick That Does Not Pay

The habit of accelerating the engine when standing in traffic with the idea of making sure that it's running is as annoying as it is unnecessary. Watch the ammeter. Just as long as the needle settles down to a calm discharge reading, the engine has stalled. Accelerating the engine not only wastes gas, but makes it uncomfortable for other motorists. Even where the driver hesitates to trust the ammeter the practice of setting the throttle for a little faster idling speed is preferable to the habit of intermittently racing the engine.

Hand Signal for Motor Truck With Closed Cab

For trucks having closed cabs a traffic signal of the kind shown will be found useful. It consists of a wooden arm, pivoted at one end on the front of the cab and fitted at the other with a stuffed white glove. A strong cord is run through a hole in the front of the cab above the signal arm, and a knot tied to the end. When a left turn is about to be made, the cord is pulled and the white glove will rise into plain sight to the left of the cab, as indicated in the illustration.—E. T. Gunderson, Jr., Humboldt, Iowa, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Railroad Mileage Now Exceeded by Motor Bus

Railroad mileage in the United States now is exceeded by motor bus mileage, figures compiled by the interstate commerce commission reveal. The survey was made in connection with the commission's investigation of the development of motor bus transportation in its relation to the railroads.

Preliminary reports show that 22,368 busses are in operation as common carriers in line and terminal service. The mileage they cover is placed at 352,800, which is considerably greater than that of the railway lines.

In making public the figures, the commission explains that they are not complete in every detail.

Right glasses will relieve eyestrain, and trouble due to eyestrain will disappear. The first thing to do is to have your eyes examined and know what glasses will be the right ones.
