A New Sort of Mystery Story

Did you ever think of the amount of concentrated wisdom in those quiet men who read, think and keep their eyes open, but say little—of how thoroughly they know their neighbors thru observation and analysis? Read

The Recluse of Fifth Avenue

This thrilling mystery tale by Wyndham Martyn, author of "Anthony Trent, Master Criminal," "The Secret of the Silver Car," etc., has such a man for its principal character. No one knew much about Peter Milman, but, as it proved, he knew everything about the people with whom he had to deal.

Church Gathering Enjoyed

(Enterprise Correspondence)

Sunday was a big day at Lake Creek church. Presiding Elder H. S. Shangle and wife of Corvallis were present and Rev. Mr. Shangle preached at 11 o'clock. Miss Weatha Trazier of Eugene was heard in a solo. Many people from Peoria, Harrisburg and Coburg were in attendance and at noon a basket dinner was served for which many people from the McFarland church as well as Corvallis and Tangent came directly from their services. Mr. Whealdon of Corvallis sang a solo and Ted Mitzner, Mr. Hughes and Thomas Jackson were heard in a special number.
Rev. J. H. Harper of Corvallis who has just returned from four months' spent in China, gave a very interesting talk on the problems and conditions of that country.
Visiting ministers were: Rev. J. S. Miller of Halsey, Rev. Mr. Burgoyna of McFarland, Rev. Ted Mitzner of Harrisburg, Rev. Mr. Pendleton of Tangent and Dr. Harper of Corvallis.

Extend the Principle

An English inventor has produced a shoe that can be regulated to the growth of a child's foot. A great saving might be effected if the principle could be applied to the hats of a lot of men who have acquired a little brief fame.—Philadelphia Inquirer.
