Small Loss
A respected citizen of Kennebunk, Maine, has suffered late from a slipping of the intellect which has caused much concern among his family and friends. One of the latter, meeting the afflicted man on the street, asked after his health. "You know," he replied, "I've lost my mind. But I don't miss it."—The Outlook.

Bargain in Train Fares
Hits Even Baby Buggies
Glasgow, Scotland.—Merry-go-rounds and even the donkeys in the children's playgrounds have been hard hit by the bargain-rate fare of the Glasgow tramways, which give a two-hour ride for a fraction less than 4 cents.
Baby carriage manufacturers, too, have been affected by the cheap rate tickets. Their business has fallen off because mothers have found it convenient to allow the nurse to take baby for a street-car ride instead of pushing the youngster about the park. This innovation also has had a tendency to make the nurses more content with their tasks and saves shoe leather besides.
Since the twenty-one mile ride for two coppers was inaugurated last July more than 60,000,000 passengers have made use of it—an increase of 13,000,000 over the previous year—and given the corporation an additional revenue of £55,000.
Automobile and motor cycle dealers who specialized in little family cars designed for the average working man say their business has suffered more than the baby carriage trade, because a car ride now is cheaper than buying gasoline.

After Sept. 1 the price of the Enterprise will be $1.50 a year in advance.

11-year-old Boy Gets Father Free Talks to the Judge and Wins Results

Detroit, Mich.—Though only eleven Walter Klos pleaded a case in court, and won it. The case was an important one, too, from the standpoint of the Klos family, for if Walter had lost his father, Frank, would have spent 30 days in the house of correction. Klos was brought before Judge Frank Murphy on complaint of his wife, Mary, who accused him of non-support. His record was against him. He had been fined twice for disorderly conduct and once sent to jail for 30 days because he violated his probation following conviction for non-support.

"Thirty days," said Judge Murphy after hearing the testimony. Mrs. Klos burst into tears, protesting she had only wished to frighten her husband.

Mother Frantic.
"I'll go right home and kill myself," she cried, "if he has to go to jail. He's been out of work, and I thought maybe he'd try harder to find a job if I had him arrested. He got a job the other day, and now he will lose it if he has to go to jail."

Walter translated his mother's words to Frank R. Nolan, court clerk, who relayed them to Judge Murphy. The court was adamant. Weeping forlornly, Mrs. Klos left the courtroom, accompanied by another son, Harry, eight.

"If you'd only let daddy out this time he'd never be in court again," said Walter to Mr. Nolan as he turned to go.

The clerk reported this statement to Judge Murphy.

"Well, bring them back," said the judge.

Mr. Nolan overtook Mrs. Klos and brought her back before Judge Murphy. Mrs. Klos does not speak English, so Walter saw the matter was in his hands. He had been taught to hold courts and policemen in the greatest respect. His knees trembled, but he put down his fear and spoke clearly and at length.

He said his father was really the only support of the family.

Wins the Judge.
"I have a brother, Frank, and he's sixteen years old and has a job," he said, "but he doesn't get much money and now he's buying a new suit. He won't be able to help much. Dad is all right, when he has a job. He takes good care of us. But he hasn't had a job all winter, and it's been terrible. We didn't have enough clothes nor enough food nor enough heat in the house. Now dad has a job. We thought maybe we'd be able to have some new clothes. Mother says he'll lose his job if he goes to jail. She says he'll never be in court again if you let him go."

Judge Murphy deliberated a moment, and said:

"On the motion of the youngest advocate who ever appeared before me, I will vacate my order and release the defendant from the house of correction. Sentence will be suspended.

Klos had already been taken to the house of correction. A few minutes later, Mrs. Klos, Walter and Harry, arrived there with an order for his release, and the four went home.

12,000 Indians Live by Fishing Activities

Minneapolis, Minn.—Fishing, primitive industry of the American Indian, still constitutes a principal means of livelihood for the 12,000 aborigines of Minnesota.

Almost every month in the year finds them along the creeks, employing members of their families, headed by the squaw, to raise and lower the nets and to seine under state supervision for rough fish.

One of the biggest fishing projects in the state is a packing plant supplied entirely by the red man. It is on Red lake in northern Minnesota and it packs annually thousands of choice fish caught by the Indians and shipped to all parts of the country.

City's Long Life

Rameses was the city from whence the Hebrews set out on their great trek, and endured for many years the stress of warfare usually encountered by border cities, but appears to have preserved its existence down to within a few years of the Greek conquest of Egypt.

Reindeer to Be Food in France

Paris.—France is about to take a leaf from Alaska's book and raise reindeer for food.

The first herd has already been shipped to Monnetier-Savoie, in the department of Savoie, and others will be experimented with in neighboring Alpine districts.

The steadily rising cost of beef and mutton, caused by the domestic shortage and the increasing necessity of importing from abroad, induced the experiment. It is pointed out that reindeer can be grown on land that is otherwise more or less unproductive and that the cost of raising is no more than for ordinary live stock.

Hotel proprietors in the Alps plan to use the growing reindeer to amuse their guests in sleighriding and skijoring, a form of winter sport that has grown greatly in favor recently.

Secrets of Ancient Race Buried in New Mexico

Hill, N. M.—The great Mesilla valley of New Mexico, bed of the Rio Grande river, and the surrounding hills, offer an almost inexhaustible field for students of vanished American races.

For centuries before the advent of the present inhabitants a civilized race flourished in this region. One of the latest evidences of this was the recent discovery of John Stewart, rancher, of an ancient clay doll and human skeleton, which were unearthed in an old tomb in a gravel bank on the Stewart farm. The skeleton has been identified as that of an adult and is believed to be very old.

The doll is of red clay and is about four inches in length. The head and arms are missing, but the body and lower limbs are well formed and symmetrical.

Mr. Stewart has found buried pottery, turquoise beads, corn and stone implements, indicating that the Stewart home occupies the site of an ancient Pueblo village.

Sea-Going Showboat Holds Itself Unique

Elizabeth City, N. C.—"Showboat's at the wharf."
This craft, which often has echoed through the streets of Mississippi and Ohio river towns and caused virtual suspension of business, is no novelty to the towns and cities along the Atlantic coast of Virginia and North Carolina cape counties and up and down Chesapeake bay.

For there is the James & James Floating Theater company, which claims to be the only deeper, a salt-water boat theater surviving, numerous attempts at such enterprizes. It carries no advance man, seldom advertises and proudly boasts that it needs no publicity. The Play House carries a company of 26 and seats 700.
"We give them the old-fashioned hokum—all about mother-love, faithful and unfaithful sweethearts, the lamp in the window, the villain, and all in a play full of smiles and tears, but mostly hilarity and fun," says the owner. "They go for it strong. But it's not because these people are Hicks or behind the times. Our small towns are posted on good music and shows and literature. They want clean shows and that's why they come to us."

No Paper Train Wheels

Train wheels are made of steel and iron. Paper was tried out in the manufacture of passenger car wheels some years ago, but the results were unsatisfactory. Paper has been successfully used for making fiber brake wheels, pulley wheels and skate wheels.
