About a year ago General Motors Corporation inaugurated a campaign of extensive advertising in country weekly newspapers, and now the company announces its net profits for the year have exceeded all previous records.

The shoulders of the pavement south and north of Halsey are at last receiving attention but not until auto accidents had become of almost daily occurrence. The grass growing either side of the pavement between here and Harrisburg should also receive attention.

This office is in receipt of the new Oregon Blue Book for 1927-28. In addition to an official list of state, county and municipal officers, the volume contains general information concerning the personnel and functions of all state offices, boards, commissions and institutions, as well as all federal departments maintaining offices in the state. There is also included much statistical data relating to the state and the various state activities.

Should the proposed initiative petition calling for a decrease in the automobile license fee from the adjusted scale of fees now in existence to a flat fee of three dollars for all passenger cars be approved by the people and become a law, not only would the state highway program be stopped instantly, but the obligation of some thirty-four million dollars in highway bonds would fall as a direct tax upon general property and would be apportioned to each county.

National recognition has been given the work of the Oregon State Development League, by such men as Dr. Elwood Mead, The Reclamation Era, which is the official publication of the Interior Department at Washington and The New York Times. A request from Raymond C. Willoughby, associate editor of National Business, for 2000 words about the Oregon system of land settlement. The land settlement department has established a service that is being used by many farmers throughout the United States as nearly 1500 inquiries a month have been received without the expenditure of money in classified advertising since April. Population and new wealth, bringing production, trade and commerce, is the only way to added prosperity, and Oregon needs its idle acres to be producing some of the many crops they are so well adapted to.

A copy of the revised, "Oregon for the Settler" booklet, has just arrived from the Southern Pacific company. Care has been exercised in its production and every effort made toward thoroughness and authenticity, it is claimed.

The book contains three special articles by faculty members of OAC "Soil Resources of Western Oregon," Prof. W. L. Powers; "Horticulture," Prof. W. S. Brown; "Field crops of Western Oregon," by Prof. G. R. Hyslop.

The various sections of western Oregon are fully described as are also the counties. Climate, education and other kindred subjects have been treated independently and crop statistics were secured from F. L. Kent, statistician, U. S. Bureau agricultural economics. Distribution of the booklet is being made throughout the United States and in European countries.

HANDSOME FOX FUR NECKPIECE ENRICHES THE AUTUMN ENSEMBLE

BRAVO for the girl who has remained constant to her fur neckpiece throughout torrid summer days. Now is the time of her reward, for autumn breezes do begin to blow, and what so "comfy" as well as satisfying to her vanity on a fickle fall day, as a good-looking fur about shoulder and throat.

To say that these fashionable neckpieces are "foxy" describes them in more ways than one. From the modish standpoint they are all of that. When it comes to the fur itself every branch of the fox family tree is represented in autumn's style parade. There is pointed fox in all its glory, blue fox, red, platinum and beige. As to white fox it holds its own triumphantly, regardless of the fact that it has been doing strenuous duty the whole summer through.

Imagination cannot picture anything more "swanky" in the way of a fall costume or suit enhanced with a flattering fox scarf. The autumn landscape will be crowded with just such.

A fox neckpiece never fails to enrich the dressy three-piece ensemble, as this pictures so charmingly proves.

With the smart tweed suit of autumn vogue, there is nothing so swaggy as a handsome fox fur piece, preferably in beige or in platinum.

Perhaps the newest in fox fur pieces are the double or twin animal types. These two-in-one models are necessarily luxuriously long, joining as they do two furs at the back of the neck which is keeping with the trend toward heavily furred effects for fall and winter.

In neckpieces there is also a marked tendency to wear sable. This fur, by the way, is receiving marked attention in the styling of garments of distinction.

Flat-fur coats richly collared and cuffed with fox are conspicuously present in advance style showings.
