WINTER SHORT COURSES O.A.C. BEGAN THIS WEEK

With five short courses scheduled for this week and next, the college is undertaking more comprehensive winter part time instruction than in any recent year. Dairy manufacturing, farm mechanics, rural electric service, farming information for bankers, and canning methods are the subjects to be covered.

The farm mechanics course began the same day as the regular second term of college, January 3, though late registration is permitted. It continues for 12 weeks and will cover such practical subjects as operation of gas engines, automobiles, trucks and tractors, water systems, pumps and electricity, soldering, bobbing, pipe fitting, harness repairing, knots and splices and machine shop work or blacksmithing.

The dairy manufacturing short course of interest principally to creamery workers or those contemplating such positions, extends from January 9 to February 3. It affords opportunity for creamery men to pick up the most up-to-date minute information in the industry particularly in the line of cream grading and butter making.

The rural electric service men and bankers are due the week beginning January 23. The former will have a six day session in which will be given the information gathered by the experiment station and the Oregon committee on electricity in agriculture. Economic application of electric power to farming operations will be taught in lectures and demonstrations.

Oregon bankers will be here only two days, Monday and Tuesday but during that time they will take part in a comprehensive program designed to give them the latest information on the economic aspects of farming operations in this state as found in all branches of the industry.

TO WRITE SHORT STORIES FOR STEAMSHIP COMPANY

That the United States is taking an increasing interest in its trade with South America, is evidenced by the action of the McCormick steamship line in sending two well known authors completely around that continent on one of its freighters. The writers will stop at the principal ports and gain material for articles of a practical character on the needs of South American countries which North American industries can supply. The trip will take five months.

The men selected to do the writing are Albert Richard Wetgen, who seven years ago resided near Harrisburg and at that time was harboring ambitions to be a story writer but his friends took him more as a joke in a literary way, the only one supporting him was Albert himself. Shortly after this Mr. Wetgen broke into the sacred precincts of Blue Book, Red Book, and on up to The Saturday Evening Post, Collier's and other high grade short story publications. He is author of "Captains All," winner of O. Henry Prize for the best short story of 1926. The other writer is James Stevens, also a contributor to Saturday Evening Post and other story papers.

Steamship companies can do a great deal to encourage trade between our own nation and foreign lands by getting practical facts before the people of both countries.
