The county court has marshaled sufficient help this year to enforce the collection of the dog tax and are giving notice to that effect. Help has been a handicap in the past but with sufficient collectors the work will begin March 2nd. With 8,000 dogs in the county and about 400 licensed we can see but little benefits accrue to the county from the tax for nearly all will be necessary to defray expense of collecting. But it is a law and placed on the statute books by a majority of those voting at the time and like all other laws, should be enforced by those elected to that duty.

The American citizen is one of the most heavily taxed in the world. His home and property, his theatre ticket, everything he eats or drinks or does is taxed. Our national government is conducted with a fair degree of economy. A well balanced municipal and state government doing away with red tape and combined with good business judgment will effect a tax reduction. Locally speaking the city of Halsey has no indebtedness and the county is in very good shape financially.

Herbert Hoover, in his report for the fiscal year 1927, declares that the rate of real wages in the United States during that period "remained higher than anywhere else in the world, or in any other time in world history." He declares that this high level of prosperity was the result of a general and permanent progress, based on sound fundamentals, giving reason for the belief that satisfactory conditions will continue.

Major-General George Washington Goethals, who carried the stupendous Panama canal project to successful completion, passed away a few days ago in his 70th birthday. For his work in the construction of the Panama canal and his long and useful service in other fields America will hold him in grateful remembrance.

Completing its eighth consecutive year without a fatality to passengers in steam train accidents, the Southern Pacific established a new record for prevention of accidents to passengers and employees during 1927.

Ten Jews are members of the United States House of Representatives: Bloom, Celler, Cohen, Dickstein, Jacobstein and Sarovich of New York; Golder of Pennsylvania; Sabath of Illinois; Bacharach of New Jersey and Mrs Kahn of California. No Jews are members of the senate.

Mrs. Evangelina Lindbergh, mother of Charles, has been presented with a volume of autographed tributes from prominent Frenchmen, who sent Mme. C. Boas de Jonveaux to deliver the token in person.

The United States senate has adopted a resolution authorizing an appropriation of $50,000 for a monument in Washington to commemorate the services and sacrifices of the women of the United States in the World War.

Why not admit that all murderers are insane and then fix the penalty severe enough to keep them from going insane.

The man who has faith in his business and his business ability is the one who will tell the world his faith.

A Petty Business

It has been said that Uncle Sam is a poor business man. Most of his excursions into business of magnitude have resulted rather disastrously for the taxpayers who have to pay his losses.

Possibly that is why he engages in the business of printing envelopes in competition with private citizens. In such business he appears to shine. He might be a success in running a chain of government operated peanut stands as there would be about as much of an excuse for one activity as the other. The money thus lost by the post office department is made up by further taxation, drawn in part from the very citizens who are injured by this uncalled for competition.

Bills are, before congress whose object is to end this unfair and indefensible practice of printing envelopes by the government. It is an injustice to everyone.

De Voss to Be Speaker at Educational Exposition at Corvallis

DeVoss, professor of psychology and director of research at San Jose state teachers college. He has attained a national reputation in vocational guidance, the underlying purpose of the exposition. Full delegations as limited by accommodations there will again attend.

The Impression We Leave

By Thomas Arkle Clark, dean of men, University of Illinois

I HAVE often wondered what my father used to think of the impression he made upon me when, as he sometimes did, he sat down to talk to me upon serious matters and to advise me. He did not do this often, but it was seriously done when he undertook it, and sincerely. I sat quite impassive as he talked. I made no reply, I did not enter into the discussion at all, and I gave no indication that his words were falling upon anything but very stony ground. I imagine he thought:

"Well, the boy is hopeless anyway; youth goes its own road regardless of the advice of age, so why talk longer."

That is about what I wanted him to think, but in reality I had great respect for his suggestions. I valued them then and I value them even more highly today. I had the feeling which most youths have of not wanting to give the impression that I cared much for what was being said to me.

I was walking down Michigan avenue one rainy morning not long ago when I was hailed by a friendly voice from a car on the boulevard.

"Where are you going?" the voice inquired, and then "Let me take you."

It was Payton whom I had not seen for ten years or so—in fact not since he had graduated from college. Payton had had his ups and downs in college. His path scholastically and morally had not always been as straight as I could have wished, and I had more than once counseled him. He tucked me into the runabout and we started down the street toward my destination.

"Where've you been since I last saw you?" I inquired. He had been everywhere it seemed to me—he is an engineer—in South America, in Nicaragua, in the Canal Zone, and he had had a most interesting and profitable experience. Now he had come back to a different sort of civilization. He told his story well, and we sat parked at the side of the street until I almost forgot my errand down the street.

"Do you remember," he asked me as I was leaving him, "that you used to give me a good deal of advice when I was an undergraduate? I wanted you to think then that I gave little heed to it, and I know you thought that was the case. You were quite mistaken. I knew you were right, and I followed your advice though I wanted to make you think otherwise. I've been in some of the worst holes in the world but I want you to know that I've kept clean. Don't be discouraged; you make more of an impression on us than you think."

Hammond dropped in at homecoming. He had been a very arrogant, conceited fellow in college, able but tactless.

"You tried to teach me to be a little more tactful," he said, "and I guess you thought you failed. Well, I'm learning. You really did make a dent on my thick skin though it seemed not at the time."

And if I do, then you can, too.

Vital Retail Problems Stated for Discussion at O.S.C. Feb. 13-15

Relations of retailers and wholesalers and the cost of doing retail business are the two main themes for the annual convention of the Oregon Retail Merchants association at Corvallis February 13 to 15. Considerable data on the latter question has been assembled by school of commerce for consideration by the merchants.

J. H. Garrett of Hillsboro, president, and O. F. Tate, Portland, executive secretary, report that increased interest in this year's meeting insures a high attendance. Trade groups again will be grocers, hardware, department stores, furniture, general stores and drugs.

Oregon's State Chamber of Commerce Should Be Maintained

Thirty-five states maintain state chambers of commerce or other similar organizations. Oregon must maintain her state chamber of commerce, as it is a state-wide organization devoted to giving publicity and answering inquiries regarding her industrial and agricultural resources.

No general campaign for funds for the Oregon State Chamber has been made for two years outside of Portland, aside from certain sums paid in from the budgets of local chambers.

Oregon has received more favorable publicity during the past three years than ever before in her history and it is a very opportune time to continue this work. The state chamber is the logical central organization to promote this plan.
