Candy for Her--

A dainty box of any of the popular brands of candies in our well assorted stock would make a most appropriate gift to your best girl—sweetheart or wife.

The gift would be doubly acceptable if purchased at Clark's where none but the best is carried in stock.

The next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. C. E. Evans on Thursday, May 10.

PINE GROVE

Mrs. W. D. McLaren entertained the members of the Kroweiden club at her home Wednesday afternoon. During the business session plans were made for the entertaining of the husbands and families of the members at the home of Mrs. Russel Githens on the evening of May 5.

During the social hour the hostesses served ice cream and cake.

ALFORD

Monday evening Miss Lillie Rickard was a guest at a party given by Mrs. Loop at her home, in honor of Miss Vera Pullen. Games were the diversion for several hours after which refreshments were served. Fifteen were present for this pleasant evening.

SCHOOL NOTES

Edited By Wilma Wahl

The student body officers have been elected for next year and are as follows: president, Bessie Reynolds; vice president, Wilma Wahl; secretary, Ruth Sturtevant; treasurer, Lucille Phelps; sergeant at arms, Colly McCord; reporter, Muriel Lake; yell leader, Ellsworth Gardner.

The girls of the Shedd grade school played the girls of the local grades. The Halsey team was defeated, the score being 7 to 8.

Last Wednesday the boys of the high school went to Harrisburg to play a practice game with the team there.

The high school play "Aaron Bogg, Freshman," will be presented at the City Hall, Friday, May 11.

The senior class held a meeting last week. It was decided to have the baccalaureate service at the Church of Christ on May 20. Class night will be at the Methodist church May 23.

In giving the honor roll last week the name of Bessie Reynolds was omitted from the "B" average list.

The high school picnic will be at Triangle Lake on June 1. The athletic manager is trying to get a ball game with Blachley on that day.

TAKING TO WONDERING

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE king was in a sad way, so the legend ran, as kings have often been, and are still today, if reports are to be believed. There was a great oak tree that grew against the palace wall that was so big and so thick in its branches that it shut out all the sunlight from the king's palace. The king had offered many, many dollars to anyone who would cut down the huge tree and let the sunlight into the great castle in which he lived, but no one had been able to do it, for as soon as ever one chip of the oak's trunk flew off under the stroke of the ax two more grew in its stead.

And this was not all. The king had dug a well which was to hold water for the whole year, but although all his neighbors had wells, when they came to sink a well for the king whose palace stood high above the valley, they had gone down only a few inches before they struck an impenetrable rock.

But the king had set his heart upon having the oak tree cut down, and upon having a well sunk that would furnish his household with abundant water, and to anyone who could accomplish these two things he agreed to give the lovely princess for a wife and half his kingdom. It was a prize well worth working for, for the kingdom was a noble one and the princess was beautiful beyond description.

It was Peter and Paul and Jack—three brothers—who set out in the hope of finding a way to cut down the tree and to dig the well.

It was Jack whose curiosity led him to wondering concerning a sound of chopping which he heard up the hillside as the three brothers were getting out toward the palace, and following the sound he came upon a magic ax chopping away at a great tree, and this he put into his pocket.

And this same curiosity discovered to him a spade that could penetrate the hardest rock, and a stream of water which flowed uninterruptedly as it was told to do. The older brothers mocked him for his curiosity but with the ax and the spade and the little stream he was able to fell the oak and to dig the well and to fill it to the brim. And so he won the wonderful princess for his bride and he came into possession of half the kingdom, while his brothers had their ears cut off and were sent to a desert island.

And as the story ends, "Well, Jack wasn't so much out of his mind when he took to wondering."

There are a great many clever young people today—clever as Peter and Paul and Jack—and a good many of these clever ones are in college and would gladly find an easy way to dig

The Most Misunderstood Woman In American History

Who knows Lincoln—the Suitor—the Husband—the Father? Who knows the story of his marriage to Mary Todd and their later trials and triumphs.

Only a small group of intimate relatives have had access to Lincoln's heart and home, and now these relatives—the family of Mary Todd—have broken the silence of sixty years to write this great romance, the story of "Mary, Wife of Lincoln," by Kate Helm, her niece. The first big installment of this touching, tragic story will appear in the May number of McCall's Magazine.

Mary, Wife of Lincoln, is first of all a great romance! It is one with the romances of old that will live through the ages—a story that will awaken the sympathies and stir the hearts of all its readers.
