Achievement Day last Saturday was a success from every angle. The event, dedicated to the advancement of education in every branch vital to a farm community, is somewhat a holiday all its own, being free from the glamor of the carnival usually imported for every holiday gathering held now adays.

The parade of floats, band, industrial clubs, and livestock was well made up and presented. At the school house were the exhibits of the handiwork of pupils of the schools, and 4-H clubs.

Good, clean sports were indulged in by both young and old; here two little fellows with boxing gloves were working furiously at the "manly art," there girls doing their best to add points in a volley ball game while at another place on the school grounds father and son were opposing one another in a hotly contested baseball game and mother on the side lines cheering. Some who live in the cities who so profoundly pity those of rural districts because they fear they are missing something in this life, should have had the opportunity to have met this happy community gathering.

Boys of the present generation are popularly supposed to be rather wild, just as girls and older folks are supposed to be. To hear the pessimists tell it, nearly everybody is on the down grade. This being a quite widespread belief, it is reassuring to read a bit of news from Odenville, Alabama, where the boys of the high school have organized the Lindbergh Science club. Its object is stated by the boys to be "to develop more interest in science and actually prove it by experiments." Members pay a small monthly fee for the purchase of apparatus and books. Meetings are held weekly. This is a fine idea and worthy of imitation and it shows that all boys are not thinking of jazz and modern accomplishments.

Camp counsellors, playground directors, leaders of Boys and Girl Scouts, swimming instructors, and others interested in aquatic sports who wish to qualify as Red Cross life-savers or life-saving examiners are invited to pack their bags and entrain for Corvallis where a Red Cross Life-Saving Institute will be conducted from June 8th to 17th inclusive. This is one of ten such institutes which the American National Red Cross will conduct throughout the country during the summer, three being scheduled for the Pacific coast.

A tractor at Wilbur, Washington, put in 21 acres of grain in 4 1/2 hours, said to be a new record. Tractor outfits in Montana have been running steadily for three shifts, not even stopping for lunch where spare drivers were available. Machines are getting one jump ahead of the weather man.

A professor declares the shark was the first of our ancestors to have a face. Other characteristics also appear to have been transmitted to some humans.

This is the season when father takes a few furtive glances at the clothing store windows and then gets the old Palm Beach pressed.

The greatest difficulty around a construction job is to find parking space for the laborers' cars.

Californians bent on a vacation are headed toward Oregon.

University of Oregon, Eugene—George Belknap, of Moro, graduate student in philosophy at the University of Oregon, has been appointed Sage fellow in philosophy at Cornell University for next year, it was announced by Dr. George Rebec, head of the philosophy department here. This is regarded as one of the highest honors that can be conferred upon philosophy students, and it is usually only given after a year of residence study in Cornell.

Mr. Belknap, who was a journalism major during the first part of his university career, has won high distinction in scholarship. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic society, and Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism fraternity.

Questionnaire Shows

Art Interest in State

University of Oregon, Eugene.—People in Oregon are interested in art, it is noted as a result of a survey completed by the extension division of the University of Oregon. A questionnaire was sent recently to a number of people interested in correspondence courses, asking them to list subjects they believed should be added to courses now offered, and 21 per cent of those replying asked for more instruction in art subjects, such as architectural drawing, history of art, design, illustrations, interior decorating and similar phases. There was a wide divergence noted in other lines of study requested.

This is held to be especially significant at this time, since it is planned to erect the Prince L. Campbell museum of fine arts on the campus at Eugene in the near future. This structure will be financed by popular subscription, and a large part of the funds have already been subscribed. It will be one of the finest art buildings in the United States, and will house the Murray Warner art collection as well as other art collections and objects.

THE BUSINESS OF GETTING WELL

myself, and in what various and curious ways they had found relief.

"It's rheumatism that's the matter with you," Bland said to me. "We all get it as we grow older. Now I had the same thing. What you need is massage, and then soak a red flannel cloth in turpentine and bind it about the joint and you'll be all right in no time. Now try it; it's simple, but effective."

"There's a man over in Ohio who will fix you up," Grogan suggested. "A wonderful man! He isn't a doctor, but the way he can straighten out troubles like yours is amazing. You ought to see him."

"What you need," Blake said to me — he had heard about my trouble and came a long way to see me — "is an osteopath. You know they may not be regular doctors, but they do know all about bones and joints and things. I was in an awful fix with my knee — worse than you are — and I just went to an osteopath. You don't need to tell anyone who's treating you."

"It's your tonsils," the next friend suggested. "You'll have to have your tonsils out," and the next one thought it was probably my teeth or gallstones, or a bad digestion which was at the root of the matter. All sorts of lotions and medicaments and appliances were suggested to me, no two alike, and no two persons giving the same advice.

It is a complicated business, this business of getting well, and one which every other man knows far better than you do yourself.

I HAVE not had much personal experience with illness. I have had too busy a life to "enjoy poor health." If I have not felt well at times I have said very little about it, have gone about my affairs, and the trouble has cured itself. Not that I want to give the impression that I do not believe in illness — there are active germs in the world ready to pounce down and conquer the susceptible, I know, and glands and organs and curious appendages in this complex body of ours which are sure to get out of order. I have just been lucky. The germs have looked me over, have shaken their heads and passed on to a more savory victim.

I have not often consulted a physician. Occasionally I have submitted myself to his hands to be thumped and tested and examined to see that everything was working as it should. I am told that 95 per cent or at least some high percentage of people who are ill would get well whether they consult a doctor or not. Of course, they would suffer longer and more severely, but they would finally come around.

I had a slight injury to one of my joints a few months ago which did not yield readily to treatment, but rather grew worse. I had the most expert advice on the matter that I could get and followed it. It was the advice of sympathetic and wholly unselfish friends which interested me most. I had never before suspected how many people had been in the same situation as I now found Ringdorf returned Thursday from a very pleasant trip which took them to Medford where Mrs. Rike attended the annual convention of the Music Teachers Association of Oregon while Mr. Rike and Mr. Ringdorf enjoyed the beauties of the southern Oregon city. After the convention they drove to the coast reaching Winchester Bay the first day where they experienced the exhilarating sport of clam digging. A trip on a fishing boat and visiting the fish packing plant at Reedsport were enjoyed. Mr. Ringdorf is from the East so this was very interesting to him. They reported a very nice trip.
