Inter-State Air Line Started

The above picture shows one of the huge Ryan monoplanes which will be used in the new Washington-Oregon passenger and express service, connecting Yakima and Portland. The planes are luxuriously upholstered four-passenger ships. On the left is Tex Rankin, chief pilot and head of the Rankin Flying Service which is operating the line. On the right is Mrs. Margaret Porter, pioneer of Yakima, who made the trip on the opening day.

Portland, Or.—(Special)—The first inter-state air express and passenger service in the Northwest was started June 2 between Portland and Yakima, linking the great inland territory of Washington with the Oregon coast. A regular two-hour service will operate between the two cities. Two new Ryan cabin planes will be used on the run, which is operated by the Rankin Flying Service of Portland.

The huge monoplanes, under the personal supervision of Tex Rankin, the Northwest's leading aviator, will fly up the Columbia Gorge to Cascade Locks and then by direct line to Yakima. The whole trip takes less than two hours, where the other means of transportation takes five times that long. The planes are capable of a cruising speed of 120 miles an hour. The ships will leave Yakima and Portland at 7 o'clock in the morning and will arrive simultaneously in Portland and Yakima at 9 o'clock the same morning, passing on the way. The return trips of the two planes will be made at 3 o'clock, arriving at their original starting points at 5 o'clock, allowing a six-hour stop-over in the business hours of the day.

The planes which will be used on the run have luxuriously upholstered cabins, with comfortable seats and long glass panels through which the whole vast panorama of the country flown over is easily visible.

The first passenger on the initial day of the run was Mrs. Margaret Porter, a 79-year-old pioneer of Yakima. Mrs. Porter was thrilled by the change in transportation since she toiled over the road many years ago by ox-team.
