Lesson for Misers in Chinese Legend

An aged Chinese, noted far and wide among his neighbors for his penuriousness, was one day discovered running frantically up and down in front of his small hut, beating his breast and crying out in doleful lamentations.

"Woe is me!" he cried, "woe is me! Some one last night stole away the treasure which I had buried in my garden, and left a stone in its place." "And why do you weep?" asked a neighbor. "You never used your treasure. Bring yourself to believe, that the stone is still your treasure, and you will be as well off as you ever were."

The neighbor was right. A buried treasure is of no more value to the world than a buried stone. One of the pathetic truths of life is that so many fail to realize this fact. Had the old miser been generous enough to have shared his treasure with a needy world, he could at least have had the comfort of knowing that many would have joined him in bewailing his loss. But he had lost that which was of value to no one. Not even he himself had made use of it.

Ham and Eggs

A Hoosier wife was serving the customary coffee and toast for breakfast. The husband, who had recently returned from a trip to the old homeplace in a neighboring state, was talking about the many changes that had occurred.

"I suppose you had so little in common with the folk back there it was dull," said the wife.

"Dull? Not by a long shot. We had a great time talking about the days of ham and eggs for breakfast," replied the vivacious husband.

Impressed

A negro arrested on a banditry charge came before Judge Rosalsky in general sessions in New York and was held in bail of $25,000. When statement was made from the bench to this effect attaches were surprised that the negro was undismayed. Rather there was a look of admiration in his eyes. As he was led toward the bridge of sighs and all he remarked: "Dat ge'man sho' does talk in magnificent figures."—The New Yorker.

Mother Knew the Answer

Father entered the house in the evening in silence. He was seen to lay his golf clubs aside, to tread his way wearily about the house, and finally to slouch silently at the dinner table. He said not a word during the meal, nor after, until he was heard to mutter to his wife, "There's no place like home!"

"What's the matter?" asked mother, "something go wrong on the golf course?"

Girl of Century Ago and Today Compared

We look back with amazement and pity at the woman of 1828. It is said, but says the London Daily News, we look with admiration also, for it is out of their dreaming and striving that our freedom has come. Poor Miss 1828 offers a striking contrast between the young women of that day and those of the present year.

Look at her standing there in her stuffy thick clothing, her hideous frilled "pelisse" with its puffed sleeves, her face hidden by an ungainly flapping bonnet "as large as an umbrella." She has been grounded in the principles of religion and morality. Her head is stuffed with Mangnall's questions, her fingers are sore with working "samplers," her body is stiff with that strange cult known as "deportment."

She is just sixteen years old and ready to "come out" to a life of social and domestic inanition. When she dances, it is to pace soberly through the measures of a minuet or the quadrilles, for she has not yet been introduced to the "sprightly polka" or the glamorous waltz. Little wonder that she breaks the monotony of her days by occasional fits of hysteria or a graceful swoon.

She had her vanities, poor dear—her looks were one of her few interests. She was as frightened of corpulence as is her modern sister. Rosy, fresh cheeks were considered common, and she deprived herself of adequate food for fear of growing fat and "material."

Old Sailing Vessel

Perhaps the best account that has come down to us in writing, from which a description of a boat in Roman times can be had, is the account of St. Paul's journey in a wheat ship to Rome.

During the storm on the way from Crete to Malta the sailors cast cargo overboard; they nearly lost the ship's boat trailing behind; they undergirded the ship with a cable; they let go their four anchors; the crew tried unsuccessfully to escape in the lifeboat, and finally they cast off their anchors, set a foresail and ran the boat onto the beach.

The Price of Silence

The bill collector found that the family he was about to dun had skipped, taking the goods with them. After some inquiry he managed to locate the van driver, but that worthy claimed to have no recollection of where he had taken them.

"Come now," said the collector, producing a $5 bill, "this ought to rouse your memory." "It ought to, sir," the van driver admitted, "but you see mine ain't no ordinary memory an' it'll take a deal of rousing. Why, it cost $10 to put it to sleep."—Boston Transcript.

SPOON RIVER

Mrs. J. H. VanNise entertained a group of friends at her home Monday afternoon in honor of the sixth birthday anniversary of her grandson, James VanNise. The little folks played games while the older guests present passed the time in conversation. At four o'clock the hostess served ice cream and cake. The cake was prettily decorated with six candles.

Enjoying this pleasant afternoon were Mrs. E. E. Carey and children Margaret and Robert, Mrs. M. B. Harding and children, Mrs. M. L. VanNise and daughter Betty Jean, Mrs. H. J. Falk and son Everett, and the Misses Nellie, Pearl and Grace Falk and Edna, Roberta and Ellen VanNise, the hostess and the small honor guest.

PINE GROVE

Mrs. L. E. Eagy entertained the members of the Kroweldeen club at her home Wednesday afternoon. Nine members and 14 children were present. The children played games on the lawn while the members spent the time tacking comforts and visiting. Late in the afternoon the hostess served a delicious luncheon.

Saturday evening the members of the Kroweldeen club entertained their families and a few friends at a picnic at Smith's grove. Games were played and ice cream, cake and coffee was served during the evening.

LAKE CREEK

The regular business and social meeting of the Epworth League was held at the lake in the oak grove near the Henry Brock home Saturday evening. A short business session was held and was followed with a program. Late in the evening ice cream and cake was served by Florence and Roscoe Sisk, Jennie Nicewood and Bessie Harvey. About 50 members of the League and their friends enjoyed this pleasant evening.

Long Sentence Made Matter of Complaint

What is said to be one of the longest single sentences in English on record—a statement of 593 words, covering 56 typewritten lines—was the subject of complaint by counsel in the Court of Appeal, says the London correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune. Analysis of some of the phrases in the average income tax return form is difficult enough, but in the protested instance of circumlocution and ambiguity it was set forth that a Chinese lawyer could not have supplied more redundant or roundabout language to convey his meaning.

The sentence, stretched word to word in one line, would reach approximately 35 feet, and to utter it would be a breathing exercise almost equal to climbing the whispering gallery in old St. Paul's. The sentence, it was stated to Lord Justices Atkin and Scrutton, appears in the finance act of 1927, and purports to explain "relief in respect of losses in business set up after April 6, 1923."

A Veiled Criticism

E. Berry Wall, whose portrait by Tade Styka is a hit of the Paris salon, maintains in maturity that good taste in dress which won him in his youth the title of "king of the dudes."

There is a story to the effect that Mr. Wall ran across a New York friend in a hotel the other day. The New Yorker wore vast Oxford bags of the new boys de rose tint, his coat was cinnamon brown with brass buttons, over his brown shoes white spats were drawn, and his shirt collar, tie and handkerchief were in various shades of pink.

Mr. Wall shook the New Yorker by the hand and said in a low and sympathetic voice: "Are you in mourning for some one, Bill?"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Greenland, Long Ago, Colonized by Danes

Greenland was originally colonized by Scandinavians, about the year 1000, but the colony dwindled and became extinct shortly before 1500, owing chiefly to the inroads of the Eskimo. The existing Danish colony was established in 1721. The aborigines, says the Smithsonian institution, are all of Eskimo stock and number altogether about 11,000, including a very large proportion of mixed bloods, who, as a rule, adhere to Eskimo customs and language.

This number seems to be considerably higher than in 1721, but the difference is largely, if not entirely, to be accounted for by the increase of the mixed-blood stock from European intermarriage.

Knights of Malta

There are two Knights of Malta organizations, one Catholic and the other Protestant. The Catholic organization is variously known as Knights of Saint John of Jerusalem, the Hospitalers, Knights of the Hospital, Knights of Rhodes and Knights of Malta. Its origin dates back to the time of the First Crusade. One or more of the hospices were established in the Holy Land by Pope Gregory the Great.—Boston Transcript.
