Farmers and Fairs

Fair time is approaching and prospective exhibitors should be planning to make the most of their opportunities to show their best products. The real success of a fair whether it be one embracing a state, county, or only a local community, depends more on the number of exhibitors than upon the number of exhibits.

That a farmer can not display a great variety of superior products should not prevent him from entering at least a few. Even though a prize is not won, the effort to win is stimulating and beneficial to every exhibitor.

In these days of home demonstration agents more attention is being given to exhibits by farm women and girls, and these should be encouraged in every possible way. There are few farms which could not make a creditable exhibit of some kind and no farm should be unrepresented in its local fair.

We Suggest a Union School

The discussion of a Union High school at Halsey is moving more pronounced as the time draws near for the beginning of the school year.

A Union High school should be the outcome of this discussion. The many advantages derived makes argument easy for those who favor such a move.

The Enterprise would go a step further and suggest a central school to include the twelve grades and including territory of from four to eight miles in extent. The educational advantages of a school of this kind are many. The undertaking may look like lots of talk but it is an easy matter when understood. Shall it be undertaken?

With sheep, dairy cows, chickens, vetch, alfalfa, and several other good feed grasses, say nothing of the bumper fall grain crop and the excellent prospects of spring grains, this part of the valley looks good to prospective homeseekers, and it don't deceive it's looks either.

The statements of condition of the banks at Halsey and Shedd, published in this paper the first of the month, show a healthy growth for both which reflects the soundness of the agricultural territory surrounding them.

The business man who sits back and lets his fellow tradesman do all the bidding for business, is the same fellow who watches his neighbor when the contribution plate is passed.

Again we remark: the stretch of highway between Harrisburg and Shedd is the scene of more auto wrecks and injured autoists, than any other like piece of highway in the state.

Don't let's forget the coming county fair and in the meantime save all the good exhibits you have in the way of grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables.

The sides of the warehouses have begun to budge from their stores of the valley lands crops, and the season is in its early stage.

A Boy Scout leader in an eastern city wants to enlist the aid of the boys toward the suppression of smoking by women.

The fire hazard both in the town and country is very great during this weather, so let us be extremely careful.

"Asleep at the switch" is no greater a crime than "asleep at the steering wheel."

One thing certain, the farmers seldom buy used cars. At least not around here.

Man Long Forgotten Gave Name to Mount

Obscurity and fame exist side by side on Mount Robson, 12,972 feet, highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. The mountain itself is widely known for its splendor, for the impression of towering height which it gives, as it stands at the head of the Grand Forks valley. But the origin of its name and the manner of its naming have rested long in the shadows.

The legend came down from a tribe of the Shuswap Indians, who in the early Nineteenth century had worked their way from the west coast into the mountains. They had a small encampment on the banks of the Fraser.

Long ago, they say, when white men were seldom seen in the mountains, a party of these strangers came in over Yellowhead pass from the East and camped close to the river with the mountain high above them. Their horses were poor and thin. They had traveled far.

The newcomers sat long into the twilight, made silent by the closeness of this mighty column of ice and rock that reached into the skies. Never before, they declared, had they come upon anything to compare with it.

In the morning they gathered their horses and prepared to shoe those that needed it. A blacksmith was in the party. As he grasped a hind foot for the horse reared and kicked. The blacksmith took the blow in his head and died. His name was Robson.

Early records of the Hudson's Bay company state that there landed in Hudson bay, close to the end of the Eighteenth century, one "Joseph Robson, blacksmith."

Research Shows That Few Things Are "New"

More than 2,500 years ago the Greeks knew how to spin tops; they had pocket knives with bronze blades and exquisitely carved ivory handles, and class pins, much like the safety pin by which its modern inventor made a fortune, were common, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A process for making clear yellow-white glass was announced as a new discovery not long ago, but excavations in Egypt show that the material was known there in the Second century B. C. A set of 150 pieces was recovered from the ruins of an ancient city. A sewer system that would compare favorably with any constructed today was laid in Crete some 2,500 years B. C., and you can turn the faucets of a system that was installed in ancient Pompeii.

Concerning Canaries

The biological survey says that the actual origin of the canary as a cage bird is obscure. It seems probable that captive canaries were first secured from the Canary Islands, but it is doubtful that this stock has furnished ancestors of all our birds of this kind. The serin finch of middle and southern Europe is so similar that it may often have been captured and accepted as a canary and interbred until all distinguishable differences were lost.

The Week-End

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I VISITED a college a year or so ago situated within an hour's ride of a big city. Few of the students live outside of the state in which the institution is situated and most of them live within a radius of forty miles. There are no classes on Saturday, and Sunday, of course, is a holiday. When the last class exercise on Friday is ended, the campus is all but deserted. There is a mad rush for trolley cars, and motor busses and broken-down flivvers and suburban trains, and the pseudo student is off for a week-end at home.

The student likes to go home, because the duties and opportunities which home affords frees him from any college or scholastic duties. He may take a book or two home, but he seldom looks into them or it. He is better fed at home, he can sleep later in the morning—mother sees to that—he has a better time. Parents are gratified to have him at home. He is safer, they think, better looked after, and the weekly visit keeps him from immediate wanting from the home influences, and keeps alive the sentiment for the home girl.

There is no spirit in a college of this sort, however. The students of such an institution are not going to college in reality; they are picking up a few stray crumbs of information while still living at home. They come back to their work Monday morning weary, bored with the thought that they will have to hit the books again. By the time they get settled down to work another week-end has arrived and it is time to go home. There is little organization in such an institution, little class feeling, fraternities are mere boarding houses, college activities arouse no interest, and there is little or no reading or thoughtful discussion excepting what is absolutely necessary to meet class requirements.

No man, not even a college student can desert his business to go off on a pleasure jaunt every week-end and have it amount to much. He must give it some serious thought and attention even when he is away from it if he is to get on. The week-end is a poor business man and an indifferent student.

"But one should drop the worries of business when he closes his office doors at night," you say. There is a good deal of truth in such a statement, but there are always incidental things to be done, unexpected occurrences which must be attended to and one must be at hand to do this—not fifty or a hundred or a thousand miles away. One must associate with business men and learn business ways, and get into the spirit of what he is doing, and this is true in college quite as much as in any other business. There are long vacations at Thanksgiving and Christmas and Easter and during the summer when complete freedom from academic obligations may be enjoyed, and these are quite adequate. The student who wants to go home every week-end and the parents who encourage him to do so are to that extent weakening his college interest.

Here's the spreader that economizes man-power and horse-power—the top of the box is from 6 to 10 inches lower, and the drive wheels are from 4 to 8 inches higher than on any other spreader—there's a real labor-saving and draft-reducing feature which explains why the most widely-used spreader in most sections is the

JOHN DEERE SPREADER
The Spreader with the Beater on the Axle

Beater-on-the-axle construction also means better work—the beater is close to the ground and delivers the manure where side winds will not cause drifting. The low-down box can be loaded flat on top—the best way for effective, uniform work. And here's another advantage of its construction—the John Deere is much simpler, requires fewer repairs and lasts much longer than the ordinary type of spreader.

Come in and examine the John Deere—compare it with other spreaders. Remember, only the John Deere Spreader has the beater on the axle—the low-down box, together with high drive wheels.
