

State College Regents Name New Men's Dormitory.

Progress view of big structure made up of five men's residence halls in one, and men for which units were named. From left, Curtis L. Hawley, Thomas E. Cauthorn, James K. Weatherford, Daniel V. Poling, and Austin T. Buxton. Placing corresponds to location of units.

When the board of regents of Oregon State Agricultural college met to name the new men's dormitory now rapidly nearing completion, it found the big structure is essentially five halls in one, each unit being separated from the others by solid fire walls. Such plans had been made both to afford protection and facilitate social organization among the 340 students the building will accommodate.

Five names were consequently selected instead of one, honoring five men who have been or are prominently connected with the history of the institution.

Dr. James K. Weatherford of Albany for 43 years a member and president of the board of regents, was given the leading honor, that of having his name on the central tower hall which rises 120 feet in five stories above the ground, making it the highest structure now on the campus. It is the key unit for all future men's dormitory development.

The unit next to it toward the southeast is named for Dr. Daniel V. Poling, secretary of the campus Y. M. C. A. during and immediately after the war period and for whom the old converted war barracks which served for years as a dormitory, was named. Dr. Poling is at present pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Albany.

Farther to the southeast the end unit is named for Austin T. Buxton, a native of Forest Grove who became master of the state grange and a regent of the college from 1905 to 1909. He was a '95 alumnus of the college, now deceased.

West of Weatherford hall is Thomas E. Cauthorn hall, named for the famous state senator and regent from Corvallis who was author of the bill establishing the state college there and who later obtained an appropriation for the first dormitory, old Cauthorn hall, which is now used for women. Senator Cauthorn was a regent from 1888 to 1893.

The farthest west unit is named for Curtis L. Hawley, also a former state senator from Polk county and later state dairy and food commissioner. He was appointed regent in 1909 and served until his death in 1923.

Renaming old Cauthorn hall was necessary so the regents honored Mrs. Ida A. Kidder, librarian of the college from 1908 until her death in 1920. When the present frame hall is removed the name will be given to one of the prospective women's units to be connected with Margaret Snell hall.

Room for 340 men is provided in the five new halls, each having a capacity of from 48 to 72. Entire cost of the building is being met by a bond issue to be retired gradually from dormitory receipts. The halls will be ready for occupancy in time for opening of college.

Fire Threatened Damage

A fire that caught in the stubble caused by the backfiring of a gaso line engine used as power for a hay baler, sent a number of citizens scurrying to the field east of town yesterday afternoon where by hard work a fire was extinguished that threatened to do much damage.

Kenneth Jones, agent for the super-made aluminum ware, and Mrs. Jones gave a demonstration Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Martin Cummings. Those present were Mesdames Estes Bass, Williams, Hockensmito, Ardry, Ledgerwood, Nicewood, Yoder, N. H. Cummings, and Florence Beck and Misses Jessaline Hockensmith, Jennie Nicewood, Nora Coldiron, and a number of children.

Effective today and until further notice, a local passenger train will run between Eugene and Portland, northbound only. This train will handle mail, parcel post and express and will be a convenience to express shippers. The train leaves Halsey at 3:16 p. m.
