The agricultural marketing department of the Portland chamber of commerce has a few hundred booklets entitled "Marketing is the World's Business," which is believed would interest any farmer or any other person interested in marketing farm products, and these booklets can be secured from the Portland chamber of commerce upon a personal request by letter from those desiring same.

The booklet is very attractively illustrated and contains what is believed to be very sound statements on marketing. It was prepared by the extension department of the international Harvester company.

According to a survey made by Bonbright & Company, a total of nearly $26,000,000,000 is now invested in the public utility business of the country, exclusive of steam railways, by more than 2,000,000 stockholders. $12,500,000,000 is invested in electric light and power and gas industries, $6,000,000,000 in electric railways, $3,800,000,000 in telephone and telegraph companies and over $3,500,000,000 in water supply facilities, according to the survey.

The socialist party of Oregon has filed its ticket for the coming election and presidential electors have been instructed to vote for Norman Thomas, of New York, for president and James Mauer of Pennsylvania for vice president.

Chicken thieves have again resumed operations, this time over near Sejo. Recently M. D. Hawes of the Sciolian Farm gave chase to a bunch of chicken house raiders that might have "felt the sting of cold lead" had they been within range of Hawes' shooting irons.

Junction City will hold its annual Harvest Festival September 13, 14, 15, and asks neighboring towns to cooperate with them in making the festival a success. Exhibits of forage, fruit, needlework, etc., are solicited. Arrangements have been made to obtain prominent speakers and good music.

The premium lists for the county fair are now ready. More than the usual interest and cooperation is being manifested by exhibitors and taxpayers all over the county, and it is believed by the executive committee that the free fair plan will be a highly successful experiment. Thirteen organized communities have already reserved space for their exhibits in the pavilion.

A keen interest is being shown by members of the boys' and girls' clubs. The boys' and girls' club of Benton county, through their county agent, have requested the privilege of coming to the fair in a group and holding a judging contest just after the Linn county clubs have held theirs. However, the Benton county clubs are not permitted to compete for premiums their contest being held entirely for the enjoyment and benefit of the boys and girls themselves from both counties.

Every effort is being made to secure an interesting program for afternoon and evening. The Shedd Community was the name drawn this year which has the privilege of sending a queen to the fair.

The age old fact that dogs, generally speaking, love sheep like they do cats, and in consequence more or less bitterness has been engendered between neighbors and friends when dogs have been too loving with the neighbors sheep. In placing a claim with the county court for damage done to his flock of sheep, a southern Linn county farmer received this information: "Any man may kill a dog seen killing sheep even though the sheep are not his. A license does not protect a sheep-killing dog. Poisoned bait placed on his property after dark and removed at sunrise is legal protection of his animals. If you use this poison legally and find anything the next morning, just bury it and forget about it, said the court.

Members of the Pacific International Photographers' association met in Portland Tuesday. W. M. Ball, of Bell Studios, Corvallis is president of the association.

Clark's Confectionery

In conversation with a prominent farmer of this district last Saturday the question of farm relief came up and he said: "All this farm relief talk is political soft soap. No relief can be legislated that will do any good, and besides another lot of high paid officials would be necessary to see that the law was functioned. What is needed is less laws and consequently less commissions to enforce them. This would be real relief."

Another writer has this to say on the subject:

Thoughtful citizens, regardless of political affiliations, are beginning to sense the menace presented by the growth of government departments, bureaus, commissions and other agencies for the regulation of every detail of our daily lives, says a noted writer.

This menace is two-fold. It menaces our liberties and it menaces our material welfare through forcing us to support an army of useless officials. Every new law which is suggested by the professional reformer and busybody is designed to add to this army of political job holders. The burden is becoming intolerable.

This is particularly true in business and industrial life, in which the harassment of reputable citizens at the whim of politicians has about reached the limit of endurance. Speaking to the American Bar association on this subject not long ago, Mr. Justice Sutherland of the United States Supreme Court said: "Never before have the business activities of the people been so beset and bedeviled with vexatious statutes, prying commissions and governmental meddling."

Judge Johnson of Idaho observes that "the appetite for minding other peoples business grows by what it feeds on, and the result is a swarm of agents, inspectors, detectives and nosy meddling matters going about the country harassing, annoying, worrying and bulldozing the people." Still the busybodies are clamoring for more laws, more bureaus and more investigations, because these mean more political job holders at the expense of the taxpayers.

The children will soon be starting to school for the winter term. You should have their eyes examined by a Specialist. Do they suffer with the headache? Do their eyes itch, burn or run water? Do they hold their work too close to their eyes? You should see a specialist that is carefully trained in this work.

Dr. Curtis has been taking care of the students of the Oregon Agricultural College very successfully for the past seventeen years, and still doing the good work that students require. After first fitting, all changes for one year are made without extra charge.
