

Any Woman Can Look Stylish

Most stylish-looking women are just "good managers." They know simple ways to make last season's things conform to this season's styles.

Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress, or blouse, or coat by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies.

Annual Fire Losses It is estimated by Charles H. Melgs, fire commissioner of New York, that there are two human lives and $60,000 worth of property destroyed by fire in the United States every hour.

Valuable Find A $200,000 sandalwood forest has been found in the jungle region of Kamkanhally, India.

The Red Road A Romance of Braddock's Defeat

Webster Brond, scout and spy for Braddock's army, secures valuable information at Fort Duquesne, but Braddock, trained in European warfare, fails to realize its importance.

It is not given to any man to know how bold and cunning rangers had been received on their own terms; but I, for one, will always believe the result would have been different.

With a squawking cry the fellow came to a halt, and it was Cromit's voice that drawled: "Lor's law! If it ain't Brond! I'm mortal glad to see you, mister."

"You saw him? Beauvais, the Frenchman?" I gasped. "He was behind a tree. I offered him fair fight with empty hands and the varmit tried to shoot me.

"Hush! Here comes another with a light step. This man will be red." Cromit followed me to one side behind some sugar trees.

"Ding him mortally!" exploded Cromit his eyes frowning. "I wouldn't take his parole at night and he slipped the rawhide and stole the gun and ducked out. I've trailed him aigh and day."

"We will swing back and enter the village from the south," I said. "Did anyone see you follow him from the village?" He chuckled and explained: "I ain't been in the village. Once I'd trailed him into it I come round this side and waited for him to come out.

My mind was greatly relieved. I still adhered to my plan of entering the village from the south, but with Cromit appearing for the first time and with Beauvais hidden in the river.

work, with Braddock, Burton, Halket and Sparks following two days later with eight hundred picked men.

On the day Braddock left the Meadows he announced he would reach Fort Duquesne not later than June twenty-eighth.

It surprised me to learn that small bands of Indians were already harassing the army and that only strict police methods prevented a massacre.

It was obvious that the army was sick and disrupted, and that the provincials were filled with forebodings as they daily looked for a fight in the woods while being tied down and hampered by absurd military restrictions.

What was another inexplicable piece of folly was Braddock's failure to utilize Croghan's forty Iroquois warriors on the march.

Why General Braddock should have listened to such rulous advice is beyond any forest-ranger's comprehension.

It was to Captain Hogg's camp of road-builders, slightly in advance of the body under Sir John St. Clair, that Cromit had taken Beauvais.

Although he assured them that no Indians were then lurking about the camp, they were very loath to separate from one another.

While in the road-camp, Cromit had met Christopher Gist, veteran of the Ohio country, who was now acting as a scout for Braddock.

"And that just about empties my skull," said Cromit in finishing his long recital.

"No matter how slow the army is in coming, it will reach the fort," I told him. "The French are whipped already."

He said nothing to this, and for once I found the grin missing from his homely face.

Round Paw was waiting for us at the southern end of the village. To relieve Cromit from possible annoyance should he be seen in the company of an avowed supporter of the French, we agreed it was better for the Indian and me to enter the village together.

daga with me to act as express while Cromit remained in the village to relay my report back to the advancing army.

So we swung away from the path in a wide circle, the Onondaga scouting ahead to prevent our walking into any Delaware hunters.

Captain Jack, the wild hunter of the Juniata, and his men had offered their services to Braddock at Will's creek, only to be told they must be under military discipline.

It is not given to any man to know how bold and cunning rangers had been received on their own terms; but I, for one, will always believe the result would have been different.

division on the following day, and Dunbar—destined to be known as "Dunbar the Tardy"—on June tenth.

The army had moved at a snail's pace. Five miles had been a good day's march. Some days only half that distance had been covered.

The steady salt diet had brought a general sickness to the army. I was especially sorry to learn that Colonel Washington a veteran in Western travel, had been ill for several days.

At that camp, a council of war had been held by the commander and all staff officers. At that council Colonel Washington had boldly urged a rapid forward movement with the light division, leaving the heavy troops to come up as best they could.

POULTRY FACTS

POULTRY BREEDS AND HOW CLASSED

Chickens are divided into classes, breeds and varieties. Birds with the same general characteristics are placed in one class.

The American class consists of birds that are of the general purpose type. They have yellow skin and legs, red ear lobes and legs free from feathers.

The Mediterranean class are smaller than the American class and are often known as the egg breeders. They are nervous in disposition, very active, compactly built, have white ear lobes and clean legs.

Fowls that make up the Asiatic class are large and clumsy, have red ear lobes and feathers on their legs. They are often referred to as the meat breeds.

The English class, while not as common as the other three already referred to, probably rank fourth in popularity.

Selling Squab Broilers During Winter Months

Quite a number of the broiler plants make a specialty of squab broilers, which sell best during January and February.

The broiler for the winter market must be attractive looking to command a ready sale at good prices.

To grow good broilers there should be dry quarters provided, thoroughly cooked food, comfortable heat (not too high nor too low), regularity in feeding, cleanliness and good light.

Moving Pullet Flock

When there are many pullets to be moved it often pays to leave them in the crates over night and move the crates to the laying houses in the morning.

Improve Egg Quality

Much can be done to improve the quality of eggs produced by careful selection of eggs used for hatching purposes.

Feed to Help Pullets

If pullets must search for their feed in free range they will probably find sufficient food for body maintenance, but growth will be slow and egg production will be impossible until late winter or early spring.

MOST people know this absolute antidote for pain, but are you careful to say Bayer when you buy it?
