Heed N. Y. Farmers' Experience With Al Smith, Empire State Agriculturist Warns Middle West

Charles S. Wilson Points Out Rural District Hostility to Governor in His Own State for William H. Hill, New York, Hoover Campaign Manager.

"My advice to the farmers of the Middle West is that they find out what we farmers in New York State think about Governor Smith," declares Charles S. Wilson, former State Commissioner of Agriculture.

Mr. Wilson and his brother-in-law operate a 600 acre farm at Hall, Ontario County, New York.

"New York State farmers know, on the basis of Governor Smith's record, that he will not do for agriculture what Herbert Hoover will do," declared former Commissioner Wilson.

"I think the Governor's attitude toward the Council of Farms and Markets is typical. This council was provided for when I was Commissioner. It was put through by the farm interests of the State, who felt that they would be safer with farmers administering the Department of Agriculture than with politicians doing it. They looked upon the council as a sort of board of directors to the department.

How U. S. Broke a Monopoly

WASHINGTON.—How Herbert Hoover as Secretary of Commerce waged a fight on foreign monopolies which had been controlling raw materials essential to industry, agriculture and homes of the United States is described in a pamphlet just issued by the Republican National Committee.

This struggle was one which affected every home, for the foreign monopolies not only levied a tax on certain products used in the home but also on other important articles of commerce. If it had been lost, it would have seriously menaced many branches of business, which made extensive use of these raw materials, thus affecting consumers.

Saved America Millions The victory which Mr. Hoover achieved by peaceful means resulted in savings of hundreds of millions of dollars to the American consumer, the pamphlet points out.

"Governmentally-controlled foreign combinations had been set up in a number of raw materials which, because of our inability to produce, we must depend upon purchasing abroad," says the pamphlet. "Among them are rubber, coffee, nitrates, potash, sisal, camphor, iodine, mercury and long-staple cotton. These combinations fixed both production and prices."

Mr. Hoover's campaign was waged by showing business how to handle the problem largely by itself. He asked Congress for funds to investigate the foreign control, and also obtained authorization to use scientists from other Government departments.

Laboratories made studies of reclamation and development of substitutes while scientists sought new sources of these materials, it is shown. Other investigators gathered full data on availability of other territory to produce these essentials.

Government officials, Mr. Hoover and others, told the interested industries of their findings, and at the same time, without any clash with any foreign government or agency, let the nations of the world know how the United States was prepared to meet this monopolization policy.

"Governor Smith, despite the expressed desires of the farmers, repeatedly recommended that the council be abolished. He was not in favor of direct representation for farmers. "The farmers of this State are encountering as much trouble as the farmers of other States. I believe that conditions cannot be remedied unless we have greater tariff protection on some products and better marketing facilities so that we don't have to sell in a buyers' market. "Herbert Hoover is the man to give us this kind of relief. My advice to the farmers of the Middle West is that they find out what we farmers in New York think about the Governor before they vote for him for president of the United States."

Some of the results of these efforts, as cited by the pamphlet, are:

Broke Rubber Monopoly
Saved American rubber consumers upwards of $500,000,000 by action breaking the British control of rubber production and prices. This control is being abandoned and new sources of rubber development promise to hold the prices down.

Saved the American people about $100,000,000 in its bill for coffee through shifting purchases from Brazil to other sources to a sufficient degree to effect the decline.

Urged the growing of long-staple cotton in the United States to break the control exercised in Egypt over acreage and supplies.

Encouraged exploration for native beds of potash and aided in promoting the fixation of free nitrogen of the air to help relieve the American farmers from the levy imposed by Chile and the Franco-German potash trust.

By demonstrating to the other nations that the United States is determined not to tolerate foreign control, and by the example afforded in the case of rubber, the signal has been given for abandonment of others of the more deleterious controls.

Mr. Hoover, the pamphlet points out, has consistently clung to the position "that economic progress must depend upon the driving force of competition." He has reiterated that:

"The problem should be met on the ground of what in the long run will produce good will and prosperity to the entire world, for no single nation can dissociate its prosperity from the prosperity and good will of all of them. . . ."

And his method has sought to bring this about, rather than to develop trade wars, in which there lie the seeds of international friction and a menace to friendly relations.

REPUBLICANS GIVE FARMERS HOME MARKET MONOPOLY

WASHINGTON.—The American farmer under Republican administration has had practically a monopoly of his home market. In this protected market he disposes of 95 per cent of his products at prices higher than are paid elsewhere in the world for like products. This is pointed out in the Republican campaign textbook.

The complete book is being printed in installments of which the first is devoted entirely to agriculture, and includes pertinent extracts from Herbert Hoover's acceptance address, the agricultural plank of the Kansas City platform and other pertinent data relative to the farm situation.

In addition to this, there is a recital of the Republican party's constructive legislation in behalf of agriculture since 1920, a provision intended to show that the promises now being made to the farmers by Mr. Hoover and Senator Curtis spring from a sympathetic attitude and therefore will be fulfilled in good faith by the Republicans.

The problems of agriculture are treated from an economic rather than a political viewpoint, and emphasis is laid on the freedom from economic fallacies of the agricultural legislation already passed by Republican congresses which includes 24 measures since March, 1921, when the Republicans came into office.

Penney Lauds Hoover

Lauding Herbert Hoover as sincere in his desire and competent in his ability to solve the farm problem, J. C. Penney, nationally known chain store owner, expresses doubt as to Smith's ability to grasp national problems.
