Non-Stop Plowing

Non-stop records in flying, swimming, dancing, piano playing and other activities have been given a great deal of publicity of late, but one of the most interesting as well as useful tests of this nature to be reported was a plowing record recently set at the farm operated by the university of California.

In this test a tractor was run continuously for 17 days and nights drawing a disc plow, during which time the outfit traveled 1,830 miles and disked 1,280 acres of land. During the 408 hours of the test the engine was never stopped, but the tractor was halted 15 minutes four times a day for re-fueling and servicing. Only one case of mechanical trouble developed, the loosening of valve push rod, but this was adjusted without stopping the engine. During the test 1,151 gallons of gasoline and 117 quarts of oil were consumed.

This demonstration may forecast a marked change in farming of the future, when mass production methods shall be applied to agriculture as they have already been applied to industry.
