BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

CHURCHMAN JOINS SCOUTING

Rectors no less than laymen are finding in the scout oath and law and in the organization's platform interesting effort and the satisfaction of achievement. Together with statesmen, scholars and business men, men of the church "join on" and perform the self-disciplined duties of scout-dom.

At an impressive ceremony at Elizabeth, N. J., Rev. William Reld Cross of Trinity church recently received the rank of tenderfoot scout and became a member of Troop No. 8, which is sponsored by this church. At the sound of a bugle call the candidate and members of Troop 8 entered. A prayer followed. Then spoke the senior patrol leader, saying: "Like the knights of old who knelt in the unseen presence of the master scout, and vowed fidelity to the ideals for which knighthood stood, this candidate is ready to vow fidelity to scouting and the ideals for which it stands." The patrol leader then removed the neckerchief covering the eyes of the candidate, saying: "The troop neckerchief is a figurative blindfold, keeping from your eyes and thoughts anything unworthy of a true scout. It bears the number 'eight,' the designation of this troop. Character, the duties of citizenship and service are intertwined as are the loops of this 'eight.' The knot is a symbol of the service which every scout renders unasked and with no hope of reward except the privilege of service."

An assistant patrol leader then removed the cord which bound the hands of the candidate, saying: "As I unfasten the knot that ties your hands, so does scouting loose the knots that have held in bonds your eyes, ears, spirit and mind. You are now free to enjoy the great outdoors. The woods are yours, the streams, the birds. You are free to enjoy the open, to practice woodcraft that the pioneer scout knew of old, free to hear the songs of the birds and learn their habits; free to read the signs of the trail; free from the bonds of so-called civilization; free to follow the life of the open road and the fire-lit camp. Such is the life of the scout."

The candidate rector then made the promises of the scout oath and law, and received an explanation of the scout grip, motto and slogan.

Twelve lighted candles, symbolic of the twelve points of the scout law, were then extinguished, as the scoutmaster said: "The symbol lights are no longer needed as the light of the law of scouting is in the heart of every scout."

A "GLORIFIED" GOOD TURN

The vision of every boy scout—to aid in saving human lives—was fulfilled for Logan, Utah, last on the recent fateful occasion when flood swept down the Rocky Mountain Canyon engulfing the little town of Willard. The once quiet spot, suddenly became a scene of wild confusion and wrecked hopes, sent forth an anguished call for help, and to the glory of "Scout preparedness," within two hours after the call had been sent, 35 boy scouts from Logan, equipped with food and bedding, were on their way to Willard, the first group to answer its cry of distress.

The scouts found turmoil and despair in the trail of the cloudburst's torrent. Property had been destroyed; people made homeless; lives lost. The scouts worked for three days on the scene of the disaster, helping keep the place in sanitary condition, so that disease might be prevented. They drained stagnant pools, cleared away debris of various sorts, located dead animals and had them removed, dug sediment from the rooms of houses which had been left standing, and performed many other duties.

"The Scouts of the Cache Valley (Utah) Council of the Boy Scouts of America," said an observer of the work, "have to their credit the doing of many 'good turns,' but this is one of their very greatest."

G. A. R. HONORS BOY SCOUTS

A touching tribute from the ranks of the old and passing citizens to scouting's work for the new—making "manhood of character" trained for citizenship—was paid by the Apperson post, G. A. R., to the boy scouts of Bellingham, Wash., when the veteran soldiers, in disbarring the post because of thinning numbers, recently presented to the scout organization the flag and staff that had been carried by the post for the past thirty-five years.

ADMIRE BOY SCOUT SPIRIT

The sight of a boy scout of Augusta, Ga., quietly guiding a blind negro across a crowded street at a point where autos and street cars rush past, was the inspiration of a letter of appreciation of the scout spirit, by one signing himself "A Friend of the Boy Scouts." "This is perhaps only one of hundreds of acts of helpfulness that are shown constantly by this youthful organization," says the writer. "There does not appear to be discrimination where duty calls for service."

NEWS FROM THE COUNTY AGENT

Judging by the amount of government war salvage explosive ordered by 251 Washington Co. farmers there is a revival of land clearing operations in this county. 56 1-2 tons of powder has been ordered, the most of which is now being used. A fourth carload of approximately 15 tons will be ordered January 26th.

While this war salvage powder lasts the price is $7.55 per hundred pounds, two boxes, delivered at Hillsboro.

Washington County has ordered approximately one-third of the total amount of all the war salvage powder used by farmers in Oregon. The saving on the first three carloads ranged around $10,222.00.

It is expected that this supply will be exhausted within the next few weeks.

There was increased interest in the saving of acclimated seed corn in 1923. Those co-operating with the Extension Service report having saved 17,850 lbs. of acclimated seed corn. Golden Glow, Minnesota No. 13, and Golden Glow. In 1922 those co-operating report saving 5,412 pounds of acclimated seed corn. The advantage of the acclimated seed corn lies in giving the buyer a seed that is known to be adapted to the locality and a variety that will mature and make the highest quality of feed. Immature corn silage is a poor feed at its best and must be supplemented with a heavy grain ration for maximum results.

The third inspection of seed potatoes for seed purposes was made by the O. A. C. Extension Service this week. Growers in the county having potatoes passing all certification tests are Wm. E. Peters, Sherwood, Oregon, Burbanks; Roy H. Jaquith, Laurel, Rt. 2, Burbanks; Robert Warrens, Forest Grove, E. Burbanks.

These Burbank potatoes are all of the same parent stock as the Burbanks certified on H. P. Strickler's farm last season. Mr. Warrens and Mr. Jaquith purchased their seed from Mr. Strickler.

Of the wheat certified by W. N. Hathorn, Laurel, and Theo. Vanderdanden, Banks, practically all was sold to 14 farmers in this county. This should insure a good supply of seed wheat next season of the White Winter and Rink varieties.

MASONS TO BUILD CLUB HOUSE AT EUGENE

A club house for faculty and student members of the Masonic order at the University of Oregon will be under construction near the campus soon. Funds for the club house have already been provided by the Grand Lodge of the state and a building site for the structure has been purchased by the Eugene Lodge.

Four years ago a movement was started for the construction of a club house when Masons on the campus formed the Craftmen's club. These men conceived the idea of asking for the support of the State Grand Lodge in furthering their plans. As a result, $15,000 was appropriated for the building, $2,500 for furnishings and $3,000 for maintenance.

The main features of the club house will be a large, well-furnished lounge room and a reading room in which it is hoped to build up one of the largest Masonic libraries in the state. A living room, a kitchen, a dining room and office rooms for the club officers will be provided. The structure will probably be constructed of brick or stucco.

The best spring planted annular legume hay crop or silage crop or green feed crop for a coast region is peas and oats.

White Canadian field peas at about 90 pounds an acre with 50 to 60 pounds of oats, make a large yield of feed which reaches the hay stage about the middle of the summer. It is good for silage or hay and may be cut for green feed a long time before it reaches the hay stage. It is important that it be planted early, as in late March or in the month of April. Later plantings do not get good yields.

Folks who want summer pasture for hogs can plant Dwarf Essex rape at about 5 pounds to an acre in April, May, or early June and have a good hog pasture in six to eight weeks after the seed is planted. The later plantings, if the soil has been prepared early, usually make a good deal of excellent summer hog pasture.

THE LITTLE BROW JUG OFFERS

Best hard candy, Regular 50c a pound grade Special, Dollar Day, three pounds for $1.00

If vetch is to be planted for hay this year, seeding should take place in southern Oregon and in the Willamette Valley before March 1. In some of the higher altitudes and in the coast district a little later seeding is permissible but best results are always secured with early planting. For March planting, peas and oats are usually better than vetch and oats for hay or green feed purposes.

PASSING BY THE BILLBOARDS

At a meeting of the National Committee for the Restriction of Outdoor Advertising in New York last week, three names were mentioned of importance in the business world, Kirkman & Sons, the Kelly-Springfield Tire company and the Pillsbury Flour Mills company, as concerns which have come to the conclusion that money spent for advertising on billboards hurts rather than helps business for the reason that the public is resentful against those who would commercialize all outdoors and desecrate natural scenery for their selfish purpose. In England societies for the protection of the landscape have made steady progress. The London Morning Post describes the problem as a national one. "There are some things," it says, "which cannot be left entirely to commercial enterprise. We should not think of allowing our national monuments to be defaced with advertising posters. Why should we show less respect for our national scenery?" —Philadelphia Record.
