You can make iron paint to apply to stoves or any iron apt to rust in damp weather by melting together one part of powdered resin and three parts of turpentine. If you want it to be blacker, add some black lead to the paint. Apply with a brush in a thin coat and rust will not appear.

To polish steel and nickel, mix one tablespoonful sweet oil and one tablespoonful turpentine and enough energy powder to make a thick cream. Apply the mixture with a soft flannel. Rub off with another and polish with a clean piece of flannel or tissue paper.

To the woman dalking to shell peas this discovery is a boon. Wash the pods well and throw them into a kettle of boiling water to cook. The pods will break open and the peas cook so that they will fall from the pods to the bottom of the pan. When the peas are cooked done you have only to skim off the hulls or pods and finish the dish as usual. Peas cooked in this way have a much better flavor and one that can be obtained by no other method of preparation.

In starching calicoes, muslins, and gingham, dissolve a piece of alum the size of a hickory nut for every pint of starch. This will keep the colors bright for a long time.
