The safe fires are those which are never started.

"Put your campfire out"—say it with water.

It's an ill wind that blows a neglected campfire to flame.

A safe campfire is rather to be chosen than great catches of fish.

Be sure they're out, then go ahead. We mean campfires, cigarette stubs, and matches.

People who go on vacations ought never to forget how poison oak and poison ivy looks.

When you leave your campfire, sing: "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More" and apply the water yourself.

Dude: "Can you tell me how to make my campfire safe?"
Woodman: "Sure—don't ever build it."

This is the season of fairs. Come on fellows, "Hook up Buck and Brindle and whoa-haw-gee to the fair."

What we need is not more horse power in our motors; but some way of getting more horse sense into our drivers.

Banks, Sherwood and Tigard are all planning on fairs this fall. How about Beaverton getting in one? Why not?

After seeing some deserted campsites, we apologize to the city dump for having said anything about its appearance.

It would be a fine thing if the people who throw cigarettes from automobiles could spend a few days fighting forest fires.

It is easier to put out fire in the bowl of your pipe, or on the end of your cigarette, than when it is burning over a hundred and sixty acres of timberland.

What a blessing it would be if some Burbank could perfect a grass which would grow one inch high and stay green perennially without rain and which would stay the same height without the use of a lawn mower.

TILLAMOOK ENTERTAINERS EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION

The Seventeenth Annual Editorial Association has passed into history. Last week end two hundred and fifty representatives of the press met in Tillamook to renew friendships, discuss matters more or less pertaining to shop, and to forget all the names they had called other editors and been called by the same people.

Washington County was represented by only three delegates, the editor of the Beaverton Review, accompanied by his wife, and Verne McKinney of the Hillsboro Argus.

One of the first things that struck your Editor's attention was a placard in the window of Tillamook's largest department store. It read something like this: "All the Editor gets at home is kicks. We invite you to come in and kick at us." Other firms displayed signs and window cards more or less striking but this is the one which especially appealed to us.

Thursday evening we were met by representatives of the town meeting at Tillamook and a band of Boy Scouts, just as you meet your expected guests at a party. The host, staid and genial, of old friends, a Boy Scout scooped down on your luggage and another climbed into your automobile. "Your car will be at such and such a garage when you want it." "This is your room." "We want you to have a good time." "If there is anything that you require just call on us."

There was speaking of the highest order. Mr. Duncan of the Foster and Kleiser Advertising Company spoke an "Art in Advertising." We hope to be able to print his full discourse at an early date. Of course it will lack the personal touch of the speaker and his audience but nevertheless there were thoughts which will bear repeating.

Two hundred and sixty guests of Tillamook sat down to the banquet Friday evening and were fed and entertained as befits princely visitors.

Saturday the whole party was loaded into automobiles and driven all over Tillamook County, where they saw more cheese factories to the square mile than ever seen before. We ate cheese and ate cheese until we probably looked like a big yellow cheese.

Your Editor and his wife and Herman Roe of Northfield, Minnesota, one of the speakers at the convention, were entertained all day Saturday and Saturday night by Mr. Arthur G. Beals, joint Senatorial candidate on the Republican ticket from Tillamook, Washington, and Yamhill counties. And by the way, Mr. Roe is Vice-President of the National Editorial Association, President and Manager of the Country Newspaper Association, Inc., and Secretary of the Minnesota Republican Central Committee. He is one of the most likable fellows you ever saw, who says probably he will change his name from Roe to Ore.

Mr. Beals is a booster for Tillamook all the time. While he is willing to concede that there are some spots very desirable in other parts of the world he is always ready to take issue with anyone who even suggests that there is a spot as desirable as Tillamook. He took us up on Point Maxwell for a view of "Tillamook's Ocean formerly the Pacific."

Just a word in closing. The thing that impressed us most was the universal boosting by everyone for Tillamook. Now the preacher of one of the churches told us that Tillamook paid their manager $20,000 a year in cold, hard cash, for whipping them in line and holding them there. There is no station that the party drawing this salary is worth every cent of it to the community.

HOME TOWN TALKS

What does your home town mean to you?

Is it just a place where you earn your bread and butter, and which you could give up without a qualm of regret if you could make more of that bread and butter somewhere else? Or have you knit something of the thread of your personal life into this social fabric that we call Beaverton, so that it would pull out one or two heartstrings if any reason called you to go elsewhere?

Are your townpeople just casual acquaintances whom you are interested in because they may be able to help you in a money way? Or are they friends associated with you in the common aim of building a good home town, tied to you by common relation to a community life which has been a help to you.

Do you feel ties of loyalty to this community and its enterprises? Do you do your best to promote its business and civic interests, or would you be equally pleased to see some other community go ahead?

Here are some rather vital questions, and the way that our townpeople answer them will have much to tell about the future which this city can expect to attain.

Outlook for Farm Prices

WHOLESALE PRICES DURING THE CIVIL WAR AND WORLD WAR PERIODS (FOR THE CIVIL WAR 1861 TO 1918 - 100, AND FOR THE WORLD WAR 1914 TO 1918 - 100)

Will prices go up or down, or remain stationary during the next decade? If you know the answer to that question and know how to take advantage of the situation, it would mean money in your pocket, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

Dr. G. F. Warren, agricultural economist of Cornell University, has collected evidence on the price trend to be expected. He finds prices are acting in almost exactly the same way they did following the Civil War. The price level following the Civil War continued to fall for 13 years. Dr. Warren believes price levels in the United States will again act in this way.

The present huge supply of gold has much to do with the situation. Great Britain alone has sent to the United States since the beginning of the war more than $1,800,000,000 worth of gold—nearly a quarter of all the gold money in the world. Before long, Dr. Warren thinks, Europe will take her gold back. Then prices will go down.

Farm Production Falling Off

Population is gaining on crop production, according to a study made over a period of thirty-four years by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, based on figures of the United States Department of Agriculture. The accompanying chart shows crop production per capita is falling.

Taking the average of 1910 as 100, total crop production in the last three years averaged 100.3. Owing to the growth of population, per capita production has been only 92.3 when 100 represents the 1910-1914 average.

The chart shows index numbers of both total and per capita production of crops from 1890 to 1923. The production record is based on the total yield of 10 crops—corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, hay, tobacco and cotton, which include more than 95 per cent of the total acreage of all crops. Since yields are expressed in various units, bushels, bales, tons and pounds, the crops are combined by applying a constant average price to the yearly production of each crop.

What Makes The Price of Butter

Evidently production, consumption and feed prices, all play an important part in regulating butter prices in a tariff-protected market like the United States. The cost of feed may regulate in the long run, but over periods of a few years it has little to do with the selling price of butter.

THE EARLY SPRAY GETS THE APHIS

Beans covered with black aphid just as the pods are forming, and now you have to put the tobacco spray on and soil their bright clean look?

You say the pests just popped up over night like Jack's beanstalk, and you had no chance to get them before they began swarming on the new leaves and pods?

It may seem that way, but doubtless isn't. It is more likely that a few "homeseekers" hit the under side of the leaves a long time ago before the vines started to run, and began colonizing. It so happens that aphid develops just as not seen as when seen by the grower. It is sometimes only a leaf here and there that is infested and even the observant grower may easily lift several leaves and still miss finding the early arrivals already on the leaves.

Hence the desirability of early sprays, preventive largely for black aphid on beans and squash, and green aphid on cabbage or kale, in all districts where these pests attack. If this early spray is thrown against the under side of the lower leaves a little before the beans and squash start to vine it is doubtful whether the pests would ever overtake the plants until the best of the crop has been picked. On the young cabbage a very little spray will cover the entire plant, and if put on again occasionally till the plant is nearly grown the crop will be nice and clean and larger and more tender.

A western Oregon grower referred the question of the early preventative spray for these crops in bad aphid regions to Don C. Moto, experiment station entomologist and got the endorsement of the specialist. It's the early spray that gets the aphid.

OREGON LEGION CONDUCTING MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

In an effort to secure the coveted Hanford MacNider Membership Trophy for Oregon, the American Legion's State Executive Board, at their meeting in Portland recently, decided to inaugurate a state-wide membership drive from August 1st to August 10th. During these ten days, the 118 Legion Posts in the State will have their committees ready to sign up eligibles, veterans of the World War who have received an honorable discharge for War Service.

Oregon has already increased its membership to a much greater strength than that during the whole of last year and now stands fourth from the top among the states in the union.

County membership chairmen have been appointed for each county to assist Legion Post officials in making arrangements for the drive. Fred E. Kiddle of Island City, who was re-elected as State Commander of the organization at the Portland State Convention last June, has been named Chairman of the Drive. He will be assisted by Harry N. Nelson, retiring State Adjutant of the American Legion.

Since it is a necessity, most desirable, and will last a lifetime, —isn't it thoughtless not to get it NOW instead of later?

A "Standard" Modern Bathroom should be considered in exactly that way. You will not question that a sanitary bathroom is a necessity, so considered by all who have regard for cleanliness and refinement. The fixtures are guaranteed for a definite number of years and there is no reason for thinking that they will not last a great while longer; is it not then a matter of economy to get the equipment at once.

An estimate on such equipment, correctly installed with first class workmanship, will be given upon request.

FARM REMINDERS

The greatest benefits of Oregon crop rotation as listed by the experiment station are the humus and nitrogen added to the soil. Other advantages are diversity of crops with steady output, more even distribution of work through the year, eradication of weeds, plant diseases, insects, and toxins, and improvement of till and water holding capacity of the soils.

Worms can be kept from the late cherries in the cherry worm districts by spraying a little sweetened poisoned water on the upper surface of the leaves. The spray is made of lead arsenate paste ¼ pound, molasses—do not use honey—2 quarts, and water to make 10 gallons. Experienced growers just drive at a moderate rate between the rows and do not stop as the roddman flashes a little of the solution on each tree top—not enough to poison the fruit, but plenty to attract and kill the flies that lay the cherry worm egg.
