EGGS FOR HATCHING MUST BE CHOSEN CAREFULLY

Care in selecting eggs for hatching is necessary to increase the production of stock, according to A. C. Lunn, professor of poultry husbandry at Oregon Agricultural College.

"The first and most important consideration in the choice of eggs is the health and vigor of the parent stock," says Mr. Lunn. "This is where the trapper has the advantage for he can tell which hens are good layers and whether or not their eggs are desirable for hatching."

Eggs that are normal in size, color, and shape are preferable. The shells should be free from blemishes of any kind with no ridges or weak spots. The egg should never weigh less than two ounces.

"The successful farmer or poultryman who is not trapper uses eggs only from tested hens. It is not good practice to hatch from pullet eggs principally because the pullets are untried as producers and through some weakness may fall down during the year. If the pullets have been marked during the pullet year and culled in the fall, it is safe to suppose that those remaining have met the test of high production."

Eggs from free-range breeding stock are more desirable for hatching as breeding poultry that have been kept in confinement will often show a lack of vigor and vitality by poor fertility and hatchability of the eggs.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache, no yawning, snuffing, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

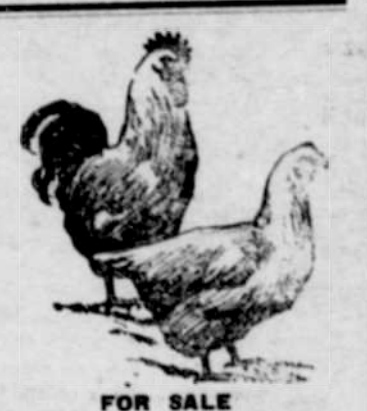

FARM REMINDERS

The crop of Grimm alfalfa seed in 1924 was considerably larger than heretofore, and the seed will probably be somewhat cheaper. There will doubtless be a very much larger planting of that very important variety in western Oregon than before. It is important to get this planted on soils that are mellow, well drained, and sweet, and can be made reasonably free from all weeds.

A saving in labor and overhead in milk production from larger herds in Oregon has been quoted in a report of milk production made by the dairy department at O. A. C. This saving was largely offset by the lower average production per cow. The smallest herds averaged 289 pounds of fat per cow and the larger herds 224 pounds.

February is the month in which clover is usually seeded in winter grains in Oregon. To maintain a reputation as a grower of good clover seed, it is desirable to sow clover as free from buckhorn as possible. The seed testing laboratory at Corvallis will be busy in February and March, so it is desirable to get samples of clover sent to the laboratory early for testing.

Crop rotation where otherwise practicable on Oregon farms helps to eradicate weeds, avoid insect pests and plant diseases, and reduce toxins. Other advantages listed by the experiment station are conservation of soil fertility through the different demands of root systems of different crops, and by allowing recuperation after crops that make heavy demands on the soil.

Sweet clover until late years has been considered a noxious weed but the O. A. C. experiment station has since shown that it may have a place in Southern Oregon in pastures and ranges particularly where the soil is dry and not sour. After it is once started properly it keeps itself reseeded.
