My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

As Translated into the English
Sometimes a story takes on added value in the re-telling of it even though the man who repeats it gets it twisted. This doesn't happen often, still it does happen. I recall an instance:

One night at dinner in honor of a distinguished visiting Englishman I was reminded of a yarn which I had heard from Sam Dwyer and when I was called upon by the chairman to speak a few words I told it, and it went very well. It had to do with a prospector in Oklahoma, who, on a Saturday night, bought a quart of moonshine whiskey and took it to his lonely cabin, anticipating a pleasant Sunday, but as he crossed the threshold he stumbled and fell, dropping his precious burden and smashing the bottle, so that its aromatic contents were wasted upon the floor. Depressed by his misfortune, the unfortunate man went to bed. As he lay there brooding his loss, a mangy, furtive, half-grown rat with one ear and part of a tail, emerged mysteriously from a hole in the baseboard, sat up, sniffed the laden air and then, darting swiftly to where the liquor made a puddle in a depression of the planking, ran out its tiny pink tongue, took one quick sip of the stuff and died in sudden panic to its retreat. But it didn't stay; shortly it again appeared, and now a student of rats would have discerned that a transition had taken place in the spirit of this particular rat. Suddenly it had grown cocky, debonair, almost reckless. It traveled deliberately back to the liquor and imbibed again. Seemingly satisfied it started for home but, changing his mind, it returned and partook a third time of the refreshment. Immediately then its fur stood on end, its eyes burned red, like pigeon-blood rubies, and straightening itself upon its hind legs it waved its forepaws in a gesture of defiance and shrilly cried out: "Now, bring on that dad-blamed cat!"

No one seemed to enjoy my little story more than did the guest of the evening. After the party broke up he made me tell it to him all over again. I could tell from his expression that he was trying to memorize it. In fact, he confessed to me that he expected to use it when he got home as a typical example of American humor. Six months later I was in London. I attended a dinner. My English friend was the toastmaster. Perhaps my presence recalled to him the anecdote he had so liked. At any rate, he undertook to repeat it. His version of it ran for perhaps twenty minutes. He entered into a full exposition of the potency of the illicit distillation known among the Yankees, he said, as "shining moon." He went at length into the subject of the habits of rats, pointing out that, inasmuch as rats customarily did not indulge in intoxicants a few drops of any liquor carrying high alcoholic content would be likely, for the time being at least, to alter the nature of almost any rat. At length he reached his point. It ran like this: "And then, this little rodent, being now completely transformed by its repeated potations, reared bolt upright and, voicing the pot-valor of utter intoxication both in tone and manner, it cried out in a voice like thunder: "I say, I wonder if there isn't a cat about somewhere?" HOW BANKERS HELP
Seventeen students are securing an education in the Georgia State College of Agriculture through financial aid which the State Bankers Association is giving. In 1923 the Association increased its annual dues so as to contribute toward the education of boys and girls in club work who could not otherwise receive a higher education. This year, therefore, $1,900 was put into a trust fund with the College to be loaned to students who need help. It was placed in what is known as the "Ex-President's Fund," a fund which has been receiving voluntary contributions from the retiring presidents of the Bankers Association since 1915. In amount the fund is now $7,158. Fifty students have been helped prior to this year making a total of sixty-seven.

PIG RAISING CONTEST AT STATE FAIR

The one-ton litter pig growing contest for Oregon producers will be held at the Oregon state fair next fall for the first time. Rules and regulations have been outlined to make the contest as useful and interesting as possible, both to the growers and to the public. The premiums are as follows: First prize $50, second $40, third $30, fourth $20, fifth $10. The heaviest pig in any litter will also get a prize of $10.

Any litter farrowing after March 1, 1925 and weighing no less than one ton September 29 is eligible to compete. This means any litter—pure bred, or cross bred, or grade.

Growers wishing to enroll are notified the annual husbandry department at O. A. C. within days after the litters farrow. Special blanks may be obtained from the college or the county agent.

Awards will be made on the weights of the litters exhibited at the state fair, no award going to any litter on which either the adjusted weight or the official weight is less than one ton.

The litter may contain any number of animals and may contain sows, barrows and boars, but it is recommended that no boars be in the litter. The pigs in the contest may enter in the state fair premium list.

FARM REMINDERS

If clover and land which is plowed early and shallow the clover roots will have time to decay. The land can then be turned up deeper two or three weeks before planting. A 50 bu. increase to the acre with potatoes has been realized with this method in O. A. C. experiments.

After cultivation begins, the soil that is wet and late can be easily recognized. This is the most favorable time for designing farm drain systems. Wet land owners should make studies of ground water and subsoil conditions and plan a drain system for the whole farm, advises the O. A. C. experiment station. The most necessary drains can be installed first and the whole system completed in units as time and means permit.

To get complete control of the peach leaf curl disease, it is necessary to spray so that you disinfect every bud on the tree. This spraying should be done while the buds are dormant. Bordeaux 6-6-50 was found by the college experiment station to be satisfactory.

Fertilizers should be applied early to do the crops the most benefit. Much of the fertilizer used in the Willamette valley is applied too late to go into solution the season it is applied. Fertilizers often come cheaper if the orders are bunched and sent in through the county agent or farm bureau.
