Things to Watch In Buying a Home

Having decided the style of house to be built and the amount to be spent on it, next the location should be considered. If the house is to cost around $1500 to $6000 it should be located among houses of about the same quality. If among much higher priced houses it would not show up to advantage owing to the unfavorable comparison. If it is among cheaper houses it is cheapened by those houses for any one looking at it with a view of buying will consider it and the district it is in as cheap and accordingly poor, with the probability that there will be undesirable neighbors.

Convenience is also a very important item and therefore care should be taken to see that it is near that means of transportation which you use principally. If you are to work in Portland the nearer you can locate to your work without dispensing with the advantages of a suburban home the better, for distance is a time-consuming element that must be considered. Beaverton and its locality is the most ideal and convenient location around Portland. Again the proximity of the main thoroughfares (the Canyon Road or Bertha-Beaverton Highway), whichever you are most likely to use in going to and from your work add to the convenience of the chosen location.

In the Town of Beaverton, where drainage is such a problem great care should be used so that the yard will not be so flat that the surface water will stand here during the rainy season and that the land is sufficiently high to give a good fall from the drain tile which must run from the bottom of the basement and from the septic tank and grease trap, necessary in this locality. On this depends to a large extent the health of the family.

Having made sure that your home is well located as regards convenience, surroundings and drainage, view, while not essential, yet is one of the greatest joys of home life. To sit in the living room or on the porch and look out across the broad valley with its ever changing lights and shadows, to the surrounding hills with their little clumps of green trees and patches of field pests and refreshes a person, and tells him that life is not all one long grind, and that the battle of life is worth while after all.

FRUIT OUTLOOK BAD
Early prospects for an abundant fruit crop in Oregon, and in particular in the Willamette Valley, have changed and indications now point to a low yield in all varieties of cherries, apples and pines. Pears in some localities will be almost no crop, while in other sections they are reported as the fair yield. Various causes are given for the partial failure this year, but the severe cold of last winter is the generally accepted cause. Killing trees in the middle west states with the partial failure in the coast states should warrant quite good prices.
