F. W. Cady Dies Tuesday Night From Shock Sustained in Accident Saturday on Sandy

This vicinity was greatly shocked Wednesday morning to hear of the death of one of its most respected and beloved citizens Tuesday evening at 9:30. The immediate cause of the death of Mr. F. W. Cady was heart failure brought on by a shock received in an automobile accident Saturday afternoon.

The Cady family had been entertaining friends from California for some days and Saturday Mr. F. W. Cady, accompanied by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Ruth Bankus and baby, and Barbara Cady; his sister, Mrs. Alice Spaulding, and the company from California made a trip up the Columbia River highway.

They were coming back via Sandy Boulevard and as they approached the intersection at 18th St. a truck which was approaching on Sandy from the opposite direction turned very abruptly and in sheering off to miss the truck Mr. Cady collided with a touring car immediately following the truck.

Mrs. Cady was bruised on the arm and hand. Mrs. Spaulding was bruised about the face and arms. Mrs. Bankus' baby was considerably bumped, but Mr. Cady apparently came out unscathed. It was not until early Monday morning that they thought anything was wrong.

Dr. Mason and several other physicians were called but it was impossible to relieve the man who was suffering from pain in his chest induced by heart failure. He died at 9:30 Tuesday evening.

Mr. W. Cady was born in Omro, Wisconsin, September 4, 1861. He received his education in the public schools in Clay Center, Kansas, later graduating from business college in Portland, Oregon, in the year 1888. Returning to Burlington, Kansas, he became associated with his father in the boot and shoe business, later opening shoe stores in Ellensburg, Wn., and McMinnville, Ore.

He was married in Burlington, Kansas, to Mame Hills, on May 21, 1890. They resided for a time in Ellensburg and also in McMinnville moving to Beaverton in April, 1893, where he engaged in the general merchandise business, acting also as agent for the Southern Pacific and Wells Fargo Companies. This business he sold to Mr. C. E. Hedge in 1902, when he entered the brokerage business, handling potatoes and onions in carload lots. About 1905 he again entered the general merchandise field, associating himself with E. G. Anderson in a firm known as the Cady-Anderson Co. This later became the Cady-Pegg Company which association continued until 1921. Of recent years he directed his attention to real estate, being one of the partners in the firm of Covell & Co.

He was a staunch Republican in politics, and always interested himself in both local and national policies. For over 20 years he held the office of Postmaster at Beaverton under a succession of different administrations.

He was a member of the Bethel Congregational Church since his arrival in Beaverton, and held many different offices in the church, being the chairman of the church building committee at the time of his death, as well as church clerk. He was possessed of a firm belief in Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour, and of the mission of the Church which he attempted to forward, being actively identified with the State Congregational fellowship.

He was a member of Beaverton Lodge No. 100, A. F. & A. M., and was a past worshipful master of the lodge. He was also a member of the United Artisans. He was interested in civic affairs as well as fraternal, having served as mayor of the City of Beaverton, and a member of the school board of District No. 18, having only recently been unani-

THE O. M. T. C.

By Cecil D. Emmons

But very few people know exactly what this movement is for, what its purpose is, and how it is organized.

In 1921 an association was formed under the name of Citizens' Military Association. It was recognized in this same year by the government, and summer camps were opened. The association furnished a certain amount of money each year and the government made appropriations for officers and cantonment buildings.

Now the whole thing is conducted by the Organized Reserve Corps under the National Defense Act. It is now a part of our country's fighting machine or a component of the U. S. Army.

There are four courses given by these camps: the Basic Course, and the Red, White and Blue Courses. Upon completion of these courses an appointment to the O. R. C. is received by the candidate. An examination is taken and the candidate receives a commission of second lieutenant.

This movement is for young men from seventeen to thirty years of age, who are physically and mentally fit.

I have spent three years at the camps; the Basic work I was not required to take. I have found myself in fifty per cent better condition. Each month I am at the camp I gain five pounds of good hard muscle, gained from the wholesome food put out by the best cooks. Army rations have disappeared from the menu since the war or early day of our army. It is the best food put out by any place besides home. Any one will find this out by visiting our camps each year.

Our mess halls are large and in the best of conditions. Little need be said of this, for the United States Army regulates the health of its soldiers more than civilian life. The intensive drilling will put anyone on his feet. It gives one military poise, which helps him in any place he goes. His straight physique should be admired, for it shows the training he has gone through to take that lazy strain which is pressing on his shoulders. The social part of it is a benefit. The wealthy man's boy soldiers right with the more unfortunate ones and learns as he does. Partiality is not shown. The soldiering a fellow does is what gets him there. Above all things discipline is taught.

Each organization at the camps is graded. The organization receiving the highest receives a cup and flag, of which each member of the outfit is proud. My organization won by many points, and I want to hand it to my associates, who tried as hard as I to get the best out of it. The gradings are on courtesy, morale, esprit, promptness, holding of attention, appearance on and off duty, and condition of barracks.

I want to recommend these camps to every young fellow of Beaverton, and ask him to go to get what is there and bring it home with him. Any of the parents who are interested in it will make me feel proud to come and ask me about the movement.

How many men might have been living today if they had had much more training before reaching the line? Are you going to be in the ranks and learn your discipline during war or hold your rating and tell other men what they have missed by not soldiering some before. We might never be in trouble again, but can you convince other countries? Learn the psychological side of military functions, and possess leadership wherever you go. Whether you are becoming a lawyer, inventor, or have any profession it does a world of good. Thomas Edison studied much harder because he did not have experience in the army.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have returned to Beaverton. Mrs. Peterson is again behind the counter at Yeager's Bakery and "The Mister" is driving the delivery for the same institution. Mrs. Peterson will be remembered as "Genevieve," Mrs. Yeager's sister.
