VALUABLE HOUSEHOLD RECIPES AND SUGGESTIONS

BREAD PUDDING, A NUM-BLE DESSERT GLORIFIED

The humble bread pudding is, perhaps, the most familiar of all hot desserts. However, it is not always a popular favorite, and, sad to say, not always palatable, because too much bread is used in its making. The bread in a bread pudding is used merely to hold the other ingredients together, and to supply a back-ground for flavors, not as a means of using a quantity of dry bread. A well-made bread pudding is a very tasty dessert and is capable of an almost endless number of variations.

Remember, a pudding of this kind forms a beautiful substantial dessert, and is also easily digested. It is suitable for every member of the family, old and young. The following rules, if carefully adhered to, will enable anyone to make a delicate, smooth pudding: Always soak the bread in water, scald the milk, add other ingredients, and bake the pudding slowly in a pan of hot water. The bread must be soaked in water to produce lightness and delicacy. The milk is scalded because scalded milk makes the pudding smoother than raw milk would.

Master Recipe

One thick slice of bread, two cups of scalded milk, one-third cup of sugar, two eggs, one teaspoon of vanilla, grating of nutmeg. Soak bread in cold water to cover for 15 minutes, then press dry and measure one cupful. Beat eggs, add sugar, hot milk, bread crumbs, and the flavoring. Pour into a buttered baking dish, sprinkle with nutmeg. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Or, omit one egg for a meringue. When the pudding is baked, spread with jelly or jam, add the meringue, and brown in a slow oven for about eight minutes. Serve this pudding either hot or cold.

Butterscotch Bread Pudding

Butterscotch bread pudding is made by substituting brown sugar for the granulated sugar, using the Master Recipe. Place the brown sugar in a saucepan, add the butter and cook until all the sugar is melted, then add the scalded milk and stir until dissolved. The brown sugar may cause the milk to curdle slightly, but when the pudding is baked this will disappear, and the pudding will be smooth and fine in texture.

Fruit bread pudding is made by adding a cup of seedless raisins and one-fourth teaspoon of cinnamon to the Master Recipe.

Cocoanut Bread Pudding

To make this pudding, follow the Master Recipe, using one cup of cocoanut in place of the raisins used in the fruit bread pudding.

Caramel Bread Pudding

For this pudding make the custard bread pudding, using one cupful of sugar instead of three-fourths of a cup. Take a half of the sugar and cook in a saucepan over the fire until melted and a golden brown. This will require constant stirring. When sugar has melted add the milk very slowly and cook until the caramelized sugar is dissolved; then follow the Master Recipe.

Chocolate Bread Pudding

Chocolate bread pudding is made by adding one square of unsweetened chocolate to the milk, while it is heating, or by using only one-half cup of sugar and one-half cup of ground chocolate. Follow the Master Recipe.

Maple Bread Pudding—Maple bread pudding is made by substituting either maple syrup or maple sugar for the granulated sugar in the Master Recipe.

UNEARNED CRITICISM

By FRANCIS H. SIBSON
Chairman, Public Relations Commission
American Bankers Association

There has been some disposition to criticize the administration of the country's banking system for the sudden collapse of prices and curtailment of credits in 1920 and 1921, and the subsequent financial difficulties of the farmers. As a matter of fact, what ever blame may attach to bankers must be for the too generous financing, in many cases, of speculative investment in farm property during the period of inflation. If any just criticism could be directed at the manner in which the Federal Reserve System functioned in this respect, the opinion of many it would be that the Reserve banks delayed too long in raising the rediscount rates. An earlier effort might have stayed the process of inflation.

The collapse of 1920 was by no means confined to agriculture, and was the inevitable sequel to the inflation period. All branches of business suffered in this period of reaction and perhaps none more than banking against which this criticism has been leveled. The financial situation of the farmers was greatly aggravated by the fact that the high land values and high prices of agricultural products had led many farmers to incur obligations based on the inflated values. If the farmer was victimized at all, indeed, he was the victim of too much rather than too little consideration. The real progress which has been achieved in agricultural finance in recent years lies more in the intelligent distribution of farm credit than in volume.

With agencies now functioning for the provision of ample credits for the American farmer, his enduring success depends upon the wisdom and foresight with which he meets the problems of production and marketing. More than ever before, his activities must be regulated with reference to world conditions, and his profits, like those of the manufacturer or merchant, will reflect the measure of his success in adjusting his activities to these conditions.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HAVING MONEY ON HAND

"Aunt, why is it such a good thing to have cash in the bank?" asked Jane of Aunt Emmy. "Mr. Wilkins was talking to father yesterday and he said that every one ought to have a certain amount of cash on hand."

"He meant that if you keep some of your money in the bank where it can be had any time you might be able to use it to excellent advantage," said Aunt Emmy. "Every now and then a good opportunity presents itself to make a nice profit in some business deal if you only have the cash on hand so you can act quickly. Don't you remember about that quarrel the Brown brothers had over their inheritance and to settle it sold that house in Center Street? Old Peter Haskins bought it in for $3,000 and the next week sold it for $4,200. If he hadn't had the cash on hand he never could have made that handsome profit."

"Yes, Aunt, that's all right for Mr. Haskins, but I'm never likely to have $3,000 or $4,000 on hand."

"Well there are other little ways to make a profit," said Aunt Emmy. "For instance, you can always benefit by cash discounts. That is, if some one asks you to pay, say $100 for a thing, you can usually get it for less, sometimes ten per cent less, if you pay at once in cash. You always should have some of your money in cash so that you can take advantage of gold, opportunities and cash discounts."

The only way a boy can tell whether or not a girl is intelligent is by whether or not she likes him.

Although it is a common practice in some of the rainy winter districts of Oregon to leave dairy cows out in the rain they are better off under shelter. It takes good fogg that might better be used for production to keep them warm when exposed to the weather. The shelter is better and less expensive than the extra feed.
