LOCALS HOLD HILLSBORO TO 12-9 SCORE

Playing before one of the largest crowds that ever witnessed a game on the local floor the Beaverton High basketball team held the powerful Hillsboro five to an 12-9 score.

The last time the two met Hillsboro took the game by a 30-7 reckoning, and really anticipated an easy win when the two rival schools tangled Friday night, but it was not as easy sailing as was predicted.

Hoag, the highly touted star from Hillsboro was unable to get away for any of his sensational stuff, as he was checked so close that whenever he got the ball he would invariably pass it to a team mate.

The game was one of the best seen here for several years, and more pep was manifested in the game than has been for some time.

LETTERS

From Our Readers

Beaverton, Oregon, March 2nd, 1926. To the Editor of the Beaverton Review. Dear Mr. Editor: Enclosed you will find two clippings from the Sunday Oregonian of Feb. 28th, which I wish you would please read. I also wish to say that if the subscribers of the Beaverton Review would carefully read and follow up other newspaper items and editorials on subjects which their home town paper covers through its progressive citizens, there would be less criticism and more enlightenment. Every day the editorial page of the Portland Oregonian contains a wealth of intelligent information, and is an education in itself. It contains articles from the editors of almost every little newspaper in the state, letters on every subject from the laboring and business man, college professor and statesman, besides the best belonging to Ruth Jones, Raymond Shearer, and Marjorie Jones.

I am intensely interested in, and strongly in favor of, the consolidated school district so ably covered recently in the Beaverton Review by Mr. Cochrane of the Beaverton high school faculty. I am also in favor of the junior college and firmly believe that this college will yet take its place beside our consolidated school districts and our wonderful union high schools. A splendid editorial on the junior college will be found in the Sunday Oregonian of Feb. 28th. Our great educators are coming to see the necessity of the junior college and the efficiency of the small college. The overcrowding of the large state colleges, the disturbing conditions continually arising within these institutions, the hundreds of worthy boys and girls striving for an education under heavy handicaps, in fact the welfare and education of every child from the 1st grade to the college should be carefully and intelligently considered by every worthy parent and progressive citizen in the community, town, city and state.

Lectures for the education of the parent on vital subjects covering the welfare and education of their children have been given all winter in community districts in Portland, and these were so well attended and proved so successful that a school is to be established next year for this purpose alone.

Respectfully, Mrs. H. A. Marlarkey

Junior College Works

Centralia, Wash., Feb. 27.—(Special).—Centralia has the only junior college in Washington. In its first two years of standard university work in general subjects are given in connection with the high school. Credits given for the work are accepted by the University of Washington.

Eighteen students entered at the first of the year, some from Bremerton, Chehalis, and Napavine as well as Centralia. Three other students began with the second term, taking such subjects as began then.

School Finances Satisfactory

Centralia, Wash., Feb. 27.—(Special).—Consolidated school district No. 214, in eastern Lewis county, is in excellent financial condition, according to a report made following a state examination. The report covers a period from July 1, 1924, to June 30, 1925, during which the expenditures were $13,232.05 less than revenues. The per capita expense, based on average daily attendance, was $113.80. The district includes Morton, Mineral, Handle, and neighboring territory.

Greater federation between co-operative units handling similar products throughout the nation should be brought about, according to several national leaders at the school. Through this means, both production and prices may be more nearly stabilized, it is thought, which is one of the chief functions of co-operative marketing concerns. Standardizing of grades was recognized to be an immediate need in the co-operative movement.

Clifford York and family have moved into the R. G. Kelley house on Watson Street.

Tunnel Decision Expected Monday

Question Coming Before Circuit Judge Bagley For Opinion

Otto Erickson, Director of Tunnel District No. 4 has announced that the case against the organization of the Tunnel will be heard before Circuit Judge Bagley at Hillsboro Monday at 9 A. M.

At this time those opposing the Tunnel will present their arguments to the effect that the County Court did not hold a legal election and further that the law under which the Tunnel District is being organized is unconstitutional.

The Tunnel Directors are prepared to defend their case to the limit, even to the extent of carrying it through all the courts, even to the Supreme Court.

Some way the impression has got out that this district is being converted to other means of transportation such as the improving and widening of the Canyon Road, opening up the Barnes and Cornell roads, taking over the right-of-way of the Southern Pacific around the hill, etc.

A little talk with different people in this vicinity shows that there has been no change of sentiment in regard to the Tunnel. They have voted their district, elected their Directors, and are expecting their Directors to do all in their power toward putting the project thru.

In view of this, Mr. Erickson asked us to request all who possibly can from this vicinity to be present at the hearing next Monday.

CAR IS GIVEN HARD TEST

A grueling test of 743 miles in 18 hours and 30 minutes for a 6-cylinder Star Touring car has been reported by Otto Erickson, Washington County Star Agent. This run has been a remarkable test for a 100 per cent stock car. The run was made to test the ability of this type of car to cope with every kind of driving condition.

The test was made by Otto Erickson, accompanied by Mrs. Erickson, Guy Crockett Carr, head mechanic, and A. N. Wilcox, in charge of Sales and Service. The party left Beaverton at 1:30 A. M., Friday, Feb. 19, arriving at 10:10 the same evening in Oakland, Calif.

For the entire run of 713 miles the average consumption of gas was 23.5 miles to a gallon, while the oil consumption averaged less than one pint to every 300 miles.

When it is considered that this trip was made through many miles of rain, mud and snow, and many stretches of hard pulling, this fact stands out strongly that the Star car is fully living up to its reputation of being "Tomorrow's Car Today."

MARKETING SCHOOL HELD ON O. A. C. CAMPUS

More than 75 representatives of Oregon cooperative associations attended the first marketing school for this state held on the O. A. C. campus last week. A better understanding of all phases of the business is believed to have been promoted by the three-day school. Directors of associations intend now to pass on much of the information to their members.

Greater federation between co-operative units handling similar products throughout the nation should be brought about, according to several national leaders at the school. Through this means, both production and prices may be more nearly stabilized, it is thought, which is one of the chief functions of co-operative marketing concerns. Standardizing of grades was recognized to be an immediate need in the co-operative movement.
