REVELATION

By
VERNE BRIGHT

All things burn with the fire of God...
Violets bursting from the sod;
The hill-top, tip-toe cherry tree,
Shouting with April ecstasy;
Wild birds blowing down the wind;
Blue-brook music far and thinned;
Many-hued roses; rains that beat
On spreading fields of yellow wheat;
Sun-flame, moon-flame, flame of star;
Opal-walled heaven where bright clouds are;
Dreams, and pain, and love's desire...
All things burn with God's white fire.

Beaverton Boy Killed at Knappa

Frank Miller Crushed When Moving Log Catches Saag And Falls On Him

The village was shocked Tuesday afternoon when news from Knappa arrived, saying that Frank Miller had been killed in camp there. Lee Carr telephoned to Earl Evans from Astoria requesting that W. E. Pegg come after the remains.

It seems Frank had gotten in the way of a log. The choker had been set back, the donkey driver "gave her the gun," the front end fouled, and the whistle boy did not get the signal in time to keep the back end of the log from swinging. Five men were standing close to the spot, among them another Beaverton boy, Henry Dessinger. Someone yelled, and all started to run, but Frank is the one whose time had come.

Franklin J. Miller was born in Blueford, Illinois, Jan. 7, 1907, next to the youngest of a family of eight children. When an infant in arms only two months old, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Miller moved to Kelso, Wash., where they lived until 1918, when they came to Beaverton. Frank attended school at Kelso, finished the 8th grade here, and took two years of high school before leaving to go to work to help support his aged father and 2 sisters. He worked in the woods about 18 months and was spoken of as a very careful hand, well liked, and whose services were in demand. His death occurred at the Camp of the Western Crossett Co. at Knappa, where several Beaverton people are employed. H. Davis, foreman; John Davis, Sidney Davis, Joe Schmidt, Lee Carr, Henry Dessinger, all in the same gang. It was about six weeks ago that camp opened and Frank reported for work. About two years ago Frank joined the M. W. A. lodge at Aloha and took out $2,000 insurance.

He is survived by his father and mother, three sisters and three brothers besides a host of friends who will miss him greatly.

He was buried from the Beaverton Christian Church at 2 P. M. Thursday afternoon. Interment was in the Crescent Grove cemetery.

The hearts of the whole community go out in sympathy to the aged father whose loss can never be made good.

One reason for speaking upon this subject is that the scriptural authenticity of our position in regard to baptism has been called in question. I have no desire to foist my opinions upon anyone, but to let the Bible speak for itself. If you are in doubt upon this matter, I promise to give Chapter and verse for our position. J. Frank Cunningham.
