Stand on your own rights, and you can't be told where to set off.

More speakers can "rise to the occasion" than can sit down to it.

Modern dresses show to what length some women will go to get a man.

All the world loves a lover, boasts a booster, quits a quit-ter, and kicks a kicker.

She was only the electrician's daughter, but she gave me one heck of a shock.

About the only time some men are satisfied with their lot is when they are buried in it.

It surely wouldn't do for all of us to have good manners.
Somebody must yell "Down in front".

Rather bright, we think, of the young man who calls his fiance "Revenge" because she is so sweet.

Girls always have used flour —but in the good old days they used to put it in the oven.

Before a man gets married he is a fiance. After he gets married he is a financier—or a deficit.

It's a fine thing to have a man in your arms, but it's not so nice when in the end you have him on your hands.

We think that what really reduces the reducers is the worry over what they are for-bidden to eat.

A pencil is that long, wooden thing that you borrow and casually thrust into your vest pocket.

Police who found a suspect hiding in a hen coop insist that it is prima facie evidence that he is a bad egg.

Even when a woman is wearing a veil as thick as a brick wall she can't help worrying for fear her nose is shiny.

When a fellow goes to see a girl about two or three times a week for two years she naturally expects him to ring her up.

We pity the poor guy who thinks that a baseball team won't have fourteen errors because there are only nine players.

If women were as hard to leave before marriage as afterward, we know a lot of husbands who would still be bachelors.

Beaverton's most popular bachelor says that life would be all right if it were not for two things—blondes and brunettes.

An optimist is a guy who treats a dollar as if it were a dime, but a man who treats a dime as if it were a dollar is only a tight-wad.

Between the ages of 12 and 18 a woman is innocent and therefore dangerous; at 18 she thinks she is sophisticated and is therefore dangerous; between 30 and 40 she thinks she is misunderstood, and is therefore dangerous; after forty she is misunderstood—but you won't set that far.

Dr. S. Sorenson drove to Corvallis Wednesday, where he attended the Willamette Valley Veterinary Association. He reports a hilarious time.

J. H. Yeager said he was looking for a carpenter to take out a partition and enlarge his workroom. We rather think George Moshafski was the carpenter he was looking for.

GRADE SCHOOL
The following was written by Liste Walker, a student in the sixth grade:

"Conversation Between An Agent And a Housewife" Agent: Good evening, Mrs.— Woman: Mrs. Johns.
Agent: Oh! Mrs. Johns. It seems as if I've heard of that name before.

Woman: Maybe you have, because my husband works near the store you are representing.
Agent: I would like to sell some—Girl: Mamma! Mamma! The soup is boiling over.

Woman: Excuse me a moment, please.
Woman: Now, what were you going to sell?
(Five minutes later)
Agent: I would like to sell
some—Boy: Mother! The cat's in the kitchen drinking up the milk.

Woman: I will be back in a minute.
(Five minutes later)
Woman: It was four years ago when Mr. Johns went to The following story was written by Evelyn Day, of the third grade:

"The Raspberry and the Lilac" One day the lilac and the raspberry had a quarrel.
The lilac said proudly: "Behold me! See how beautiful I am!"

The raspberry said: "Behold me! See how useful I am." The lilac said: "Let us not quarrel. We will go to Old Mother Sunflower and she will settle the matter."

They hurried off to Old Mother Sunflower.
"Which," said Old Mother Sunflower, "is put on the table to eat?"

"I am," said the raspberry.
"Which is picked for its beauty?" said Old Mother Sunflower.

"I am," said the lilac.
"Then," said Old Mother Sunflower, "don't you see that each thing is best in its place?"

Mr. Wood, the agent.

Agent: Oh, yes, I've heard of you, Mr. Johns.

Woman: Mr. Johns, if you please.

Agent: That's right—Mr.
Johns. I was trying to sell your wife something.

Mr. Johns: And what was that?

Agent: Why, it was cinnamon.

Mr. Johns: Oh, well, we will—Boy: Mother! A stray dog has some of our kittens. What shall we do?

Woman: Go and get them away from the dog.

Mr. Johns: Now, as I was saying, we will not need any cinnamon because I just bought four ounces last night.

Agent: Thank you. Good evening.

THE SEER
(By Gertrude M. Christensen)
I dwell in a bright Elysium, Though I walk in the ways of men;
And my soul is athrill with wonders, Beyond your mortal ken;
And you wonder as my silence,
And often you think me sad, But my soul has found a secret And the secret keeps me glad.

For my ears have caught the music
Of voices sweet to me, And my eyes have seen the visions,
That mortals might not see;
Yes, ever the low sweet voices I loved, in my other years, As they sing their songs of gladness,
In those radiant, golden spheres;

And forms long loved and cherished, Throng down the viewless air;

With love-lit faces beaming, All radiant and fair.
Thus, life is rich with knowledge Of a wondrous life to be,
For my soul is attune to the music
Of the song of eternity.
