RADIO STATION KOAC TO HAVE NEW FEATURES

New features of the programs to be broadcast over radio station KOAC, Oregon Agricultural College, starting September 27, will be four home study courses—Seed Production, Poultry Farm Management, Basketball Practice and Theory and National Government. Anyone interested may enroll in these courses by mailing his name to KOAC. Enrolled students will be furnished the complete list of lectures in the course concerned and dates on which they will be broadcast, a list of text books, bulletins, or other material relating to the course, and an outline of each lecture before it is broadcast. The seed production course consisting of twelve lectures will be in charge of G. R. Hyslop, head of the farm crops department. It will cover the practical phases of seed production and distribution for Oregon and the northwest. Alfred G. Lunn, professor of poultry husbandry, will give the lectures in the poultry farm management course. Robert H. Hager, originator of the famous "percentage" system of basketball, will give the lectures on basketball practice and theory. Dr. F. A. Magruder, professor of political science, will have charge of the national government course. Final examination questions will be furnished enrolled students at the close of each course. Those who pass will be awarded a certificate, but no college credit will be given.
