

FORMER MINNESOTA MAN BELIEVES IN PROGRESS

Ever since the Fall of 1920 Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller and children of the Progress vicinity have breathed western Oregon air. Coming from Ortonville, Minnesota, after selling out the 240 acre farm that they handled more than nine years, the Miller family had as their main reasons for trying Oregon the hopes of improving the health of their son, Harold, who was badly afflicted with asthma. In the spring of 1921 they bought an 11 1/2 acre ranch in the north part of Progress. Their daughters, Francis and Ruth, and son, Reuben attend the School of Commerce at Portland and Harold goes to work every day except Sunday for W. P. Fuller & Co., and altogether Mr. Miller hands over about $20.00 a month for car fare alone not counting lunch money and other incidentals, but all are doing well and Harold has forgotten all about asthma. The ailment left him soon after his arrival on the farm at Progress. The little farm has a good family orchard and lots of berries, a large garden space and is equipped for poultry. Plenty of room to keep a couple of cows, and more livestock if one happens to feel like going in deeper than Miller. At any rate, Mr. Miller has improved the little place appreciably and has made it produce a profit every year. He has found out for a certainty though, that it takes lots of money to bring up and educate children and the farm simply must pay up well. Before running the farm in Minnesota, Miller spent eight years in business in the city, which has a population of nearly 2,500. "Minnesota is a good place when it comes to making a little money, no doubt about that," says Mr. Miller, "but this climate has fixed up my son, and we all feel fine here and we like our home in Progress."

HOFFBARGER BROTHERS HAVE GOOD CORNER

Albert and Ernest Hoffbarger, who started up a garage and service station a half mile north of Tigard on the highway—known as the Lone Oak Garage and Service Station—a little less than a year ago, featuring general products, have developed a fine business in this locality. The boys were born and raised in the neighborhood and helped clear up the land from heavy timber part of which is in the limits of the town of Tigard. They see a good future for tourist trade in Washington county this summer.

Over two hundred sat down at the Church and Grange luncheon last Sunday at the Methodist Church in Forest Grove. A roll call of the Grangers present showed that ten of the thirteen Granges in Washington county were represented and two Granges from other counties. Those represented were: Banks, Beaverton, Green Mountain, Gales, Hillsboro, Kinton, Riverside, Scholls, Washington, Cove Orchard and Oswego. The church was well filled at both morning and afternoon services, and again in the evening. Mr. C. W. Craft, master of the Pomona Chapter of the county and Rev. C. E. Wharton, Pomona Chaplain, assisted by the pastor, M. A. Marcy conducted the morning services. The theme presented in this service was "A Self-Revealing God", and for the afternoon, "The Grange and Religion."

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Josef Tannler, who were residents of this town for a number of years but last year traded their property here for an apartment house in Portland, will be interested to hear that they have gone back to farming again, and are now making their home on a 197-acre farm in Sejo, Linn county, 110 acres of which are under cultivation. It has all modern conveniences and is fully equipped with electric lights, hot and cold water, etc. We all wish them much success in their new home, and hope they will take a trip this way some time in the near future and call on their friends here.

Cows watered once a day drink less and produce less than those watered twice a day or at will. Experiments have proved that those watered twice a day drank as much but produced less than those watered at will. The maximum difference in production, between watering once a day and at will was about 5 per cent. The higher the production the greater the benefit to be derived from frequent watering.

Editor, Review, Beaverton, Ore.
Dear Sir:—Just a few remarks in regard to the Country Store and Treasure Night put on by the Beaver Theatre. These events are becoming more popular every week with those who go to enjoy them, but there always some vacant seats left.

The Theatre management is putting on good pictures and is trying in every way to please the public. The groceries and numerous other premiums given away on Tuesday and Thursday evenings ought to be enough inducement to the people of Beaverton and surrounding country to pack the house each night. The crowds have been good but there is room for more; come out and see for yourself whether or not these remarks are true.

You can see a good show right at home for about one-half that it would cost you to see it in Portland, and besides you may win one of the feature premiums. The many premiums that have been given away each week have been won by those who were there and not by those who went elsewhere for entertainment.

A Satisfied Patron.

Beaverton, Ore., April 6, 1927.
Editor of the Review, Beaverton, Ore. Dear Editor:—Last Monday night I noticed Willis' ridicule of the present effort of the United States to civilize and pacify the various factions in Nicaragua, Mexico and China, and at the same time we are using armed forces to carry on a city election for mayor in one of our leading cities—Chicago. When I read that, I couldn't help thinking of an incident in our own little town, which happened the other day and which, in my opinion was just as ridiculous.

One of our high officials who, after the sheriff of our county had performed one of the duties, that our official should have performed—closed a certain dive here in town—and who signed a petition to have said "dive" reopened, was talking to a certain man and happened to notice that someone had spit on the sidewalk. Immediately the official made the remark that we should have an ordinance prohibiting spitting on the walk—"they have such an ordinance in Portland."

This observer wonders why our Town government doesn't enforce measures already supposed to be in effect, rather than to make more ordinances to break.

Signed—"Observer."

FARM REMINDERS

A bird house should be durable, rain-proof, cool and easy to clean. Easily workable wood such as cypress, pine or yellow poplar is desirable. Metal is too great a conductor of heat. Make roofs with sufficient pitch to shed water readily; or, if level or nearly so, cut a groove across the under face of the overhanging part to prevent water from draining back. For the average house it is well to make this overhang from 2 to 3 inches, so as to protect the entrance hole from driving rain. Bore one or two small auger holes near the top of the walls for ventilation.

Heaves of horses usually follows digestive troubles due to wrong or careless feeding. Feeding damaged hay or straw, too bulky roughages and feed lacking in nutritive value, and keeping the horse in a dusty atmosphere, or a badly ventilated stable, either cause or tend to cause heaves. Horses brought from a high to a low level are also likely to get the disease. Heaves is incurable because it leads to the rupture of small air sacs in the lungs. Medicine can not, of course, restore these.

Ham souring, caused by a group of bacteria, may be prevented by thorough chilling immediately after slaughter and by maintenance of a low temperature until the hams have absorbed sufficient salt to hold the organisms in permanent check. This important discovery is the result of recent experiments. Such contributions to the livestock and packing industries make Federal meat inspection a distinct asset to those enterprises as well as a safeguard to the health of consumers.

This is one of the beautiful French-Canadian songs which will be sung at the Folk Song and Handicraft Festival in the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, May 20, 21 and 22 under the auspices of the National Museum of Canada. It is from "Canadian Folk Songs—Old and New," by J. Murray Gibson of Montreal, and is published by E. P. Dutton & Co., of New York. In addition to the famous interpreters of these folk songs as Rodolphe Plamondon, late of the Paris opera, Charles Marchand and Miss Juliette Guindon there will be thirty chosen handicraft workers and folk songs, and also will depict their handicraft activities and render the old to life in traditional style. Miss Guindon will also sing Eskimo and Indian folk songs. No such festival has heretofore been held in Canada and it is attracting wide attention from lovers of folk songs and those interested in weaving and spinning by the habitants who for centuries have been lightening their daily tasks with these old chansons.

GRADE SCHOOL ITEMS

Laura Smith — Marion Murk

Ralph Eden, a pupil of the seventh grade, is out of school with the chicken pox.

The eighth grade is beginning to prepare for the state examinations, which will be given on May 12 and 13.

Sixty-five children of the grade school were vaccinated for diphtheria last Friday by the local health authorities.

The eighth grade is working on a play called "The Steadfast Princess," to be given in the high school auditorium in two or three weeks.

Norean Nelson visited the sixth grade. She is staying in Beaverton for a while because the school which she teaches is quarantined with diphtheria.

The grade school is going to have an exhibit of school work soon. The work of the children in all the grades will be displayed in the High School gym.

REAL OLD-TIME MUSIC

"Dad" Watson, father of the movement to revive old-time customs when mothers, fathers, sons and daughters enjoyed their pleasures together, has completed arrangements to have his entire radio, dance and real old-time orchestra hold a real old-time dance at the Hillsboro Pavilion Thursday evening, April 21.

The Pavilion has been newly renovated, the floor sanded and placed in first-class condition. Many special features for the old-timers—spectacular grand march with distribution of favors for all—a beau guessing—cash prize contest—harp solos—marimbaphone solos—baritone singing by W. Elliott, seven years head-liner Orpheum time Bankers, merchants, attorneys attend Dad Watson's parties—they bring their families.

There is nothing but real old-time music played by real old-time legitimate musicians—not a note of jazz—not a jazz step—no jazz conduct—just a party of real nice people who come to enjoy the concert, to renew old-time acquaintances and old-time hospitality. Dad Watson's real old-time dances at Portland are generally conceded to be the best appointed, most sociable dances held in Portland for a generation.
