

IS A HEALTHIER STRONGER GIRL

Because She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America. This is possible through the magic of the humble tin can. In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was a strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition. She tried various medicines. At last, a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes, "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it. Julia Schmidt's address is 115 Willow St., Silverton, Oregon.

Girls who work in factories know just how Miss Schmidt felt. Perhaps they, too, will find better health by taking the Vegetable Compound.

"Clip" Made Trouble
A cook in Rockland, Maine, shaved his head and bumped into trouble right away. Being in such close proximity to the penitentiary at Thomaston, he was arrested on suspicion of being an escaped convict. He had much difficulty in convincing the police that he had merely removed his hair to avoid getting grease into it when he was frying food.

Freak Deer Has Horn Much Like the "Rhino"

During the last winter Yosemite valley, in the national park of that name, had an exclusive little side show, in addition to the usual wild animal circus. The main exhibit of the side show was a "rhino deer," a deer that by some curious, freakish prank of nature, had a horn similar to that of a rhinoceros projecting through the roof of its upper jaw, half-way between his nose and eyes. Otherwise he was like any other deer, and tame as the tamest. Daily he made his rounds from house to house, seeking dainty tidbits to give variety to his diet. Like a pet dog he enjoyed having his neck stroked, until an attempt was made to touch the curious horn growth. Even the best of his friends were not permitted to do this. Then the park deer began to shed their antlers, and speculation was rife in the valley as to whether the malformation on the upper jaw of Old Horny would disappear when he shed his horns. Soon he disappeared into the forests, to return without antlers and without rhino spike. Now his antlers are starting to grow again, and there seems to be evidence that the spike is coming back.

Oldtime Clocks That Are Now Curiosities

The first pendulum clock ever made in England was constructed by a Dutchman named Frisonnet, in 1622. The clock given by King Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn on her wedding day is only four inches deep and but ten inches high—a real pigmy clock! There are also still some specimens of the old "Act of Parliament" clocks existing. These were so-called because Pitt, when prime minister, placed a tax on watches, and consequently taverns and other places where people gathered had large clocks made for the benefit of people who could not afford watches. At Buckingham palace there is a wonderful clock made by Lapine. This clock takes the form of a negro's head, and the hour numerals are shown in one of his eyes, while in the other are the minute divisions.

Incaic Music Revived

A variation of an old traditional theme of the Incas was recently introduced at a concert at Lima, Peru, and won enthusiastic applause. The composition by Aguilar, a local musician, brought out all the glory of the Incas, the royal race claiming descent from the sun, that ruled in Peru before Pizarro's conquest in 1531. The theme was based on an old song that once was sung in the Quechua language, that is slowly dying out in that country.

Welcome Pickup
A Kennebunk (Maine) man who will never pass up a rummage sale attended the annual sale of second-hand stuff by the Unitarian women of that town. He spotted a billfold which he liked. He bought it for a cent, and when he opened it to transfer his money, he liked the looks of it all the more, for tucked away in one corner was a perfectly good $3 bill.

Little Financial Gain From Immortal Works

William Shakespeare's emergence from practical poverty to comparative wealth near the close of the sixteenth century was not the result of his play writing, but the earnings of his shares in the Globe and Blackfriars theaters. His plays brought some returns, but not nearly enough at that time to enable him to buy New Place, the most imposing residence, with one exception, in Stratford. It is estimated that his shares paid him about $1,500 a year, equal to perhaps $12,000 at the present time. At about this time he received substantial sums from performances at court, and his fees as an actor and dramatist increased. Previously he had at times been unable to remain clear of debt. In the tax records it is revealed that he was in arrears in 1596 when he moved from Shoreditch to Southwark, and later he paid the overdue taxes in installments. His wife also found it difficult to make both ends meet. Some time before 1595 she borrowed a sum from her father's shepherd and she had not repaid in 1601.

Collie a Churchgoer

Jack, a collie owned by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Smith of Lincoln, Neb., started going to church when a puppy, and he now attends whether any other member of the family goes or not. Promptly at church time every Sunday morning he drops what he is about and departs for church. He gets there in time to act as a member of the reception committee, but he has steadfastly refused to go inside. When the last straggler has passed the doors he lies down on the steps and stays there until the rattling of the doors tells him services are over. Then he goes back home.

Mrs. T. C. Beeching of Mammoth Springs, Ark., has a White Leghorn hen which recently laid an egg that measured 9 1/4 inches around the long way and 8 inches the short way, says Capper's Weekly. The egg was so large it was broken a little on one side and contained, with the white and yolk, a regular size normal egg.

Ice "Sinks" Airplane

The great obstacle in the way of transatlantic flight by airplane is ice, the same element that bothers the seamen. It is not that the icebergs get in the way, but when flying through a cold mist the ice forms quickly on the wings and by filling in the curvatures changes the contours. This will sometimes "sink" an airplane in eight minutes.

The Other Woman

Mrs. Margaret L. Wood, president of the Anti-Divorce League, said in a recent address in Topeka: "If married people would only try to please one another, like single people! The whole secret of the unhappy marriage and divorce may be found in the words once spoken by a bricklayer's wife in a law court: 'Judge,' said the poor woman, 'when a man starts brushing his clothes and shampooing his head and cleaning his teeth, his wife knows there's something in the wind.'"

Paradoxical

Paradox literally means that which is "against opinion." It is a statement or proposition contrary to commonly received opinion. It also means a statement that seems on the surface contrary to common sense, but in reality is perfectly true, the word being used in a special sense.
