About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M. D.

Winter Warnings

At this season of the year, foods improperly stored, vegetables left in corners of cellars, open milk containers and such like, may become disease carriers unsuspected. In warm weather decomposition of animal or vegetable foods liberates a warning odor or appearance or flavor, before much harm is done; in winter it is different; stale vegetables, "specked" fruits from stores, and other impurities do not make their imperfections known so quickly. It behooves our citizens and housekeepers to look well to the sanitation of homes, from every angle, and to enforce the strictest cleanliness of premises occupied, as well as of foods and water consumed.

Cold weather is preservative to many of the most dangerous bacteria; it is not known just how long typhoid and para-typhoid germs will live and remain virulent in cold, but it is a long time. Once within the human system, they develop rapidly into the very serious, winter-time diseases named for them. It is of the utmost importance that your ice-box be watched; it is not always sanitary because you notice no impure odor from the jar of cream that spilled last week, and left a greasy smear on two or three of the shelves for several days; it looks and tastes as fresh as it did then—but some of the whipped cream or minced ham overflowed into it in some way—you may have a pretty fair culture of mixed bacteria that live at low temperatures.

We should be more careful in winter than in summer, to have pure food and water. Inspections of city water should be doubled, by the most vigilant, capable officials. Dairymen who peddle milk in bottles—you have a right to demand cleanliness. Winter epidemics are among the most fatal known. Be vigilant and save trouble.

WHITFORD

Whitford community rejoices with Hiteon that Vincent Olson is home again after so long a sojourn in a Portland hospital.

The Whitford school gave a splendid entertainment and Christmas tree, Friday evening, Dec. 23. Much credit is due the teacher, Mrs. Edward Smith, and the children for a most enjoyable evening. The children received at this time the candy presented by their mail carrier, W. C. McKell, and wish to express their appreciation.
