Newspaper Meet, February 10, 11, To Draw Crowd

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene.—With experts in all fields of the newspaper work on the program, the tenth annual Oregon Newspaper Conference, to be held at the University of Oregon, February 10 and 11 is expected to be attended by a record number of Oregon newspapermen. This is the enthusiastic announcement of Ralph B. Cronis, president of the conference and publisher of the Albany Democrat-Herald, and Eric W. Allenden, dean of the school of journalism of the University, who are arranging the program.

Topics that will be of interest to the entire field have been selected, and leading editors and publishers of Oregon will lead the discussions. On Friday, the opening day, the first topic will be "How Much is a Newspaper Worth?" Participating in this discussion will be Earl J. Richardson, of the Itinerary-Observer; E. J. Murray, of the Marshfield Times; C. H. Brookhagen, Portland Telegram; and others who have had experience in figuring the values of newspapers. Frank Feltz, head of the school of business administration of the University, will also take part in this topic.

R. Sumpter Smith of Medford will talk on "The Two Percent Discount," and H. L. St. Claire, of Gresham, will lead the discussion on this subject.

"Ways of Gaining and Keeping a Hold on the Rural Circulation" will also be brought up Friday. Alex Gabrielson, field agent of the Clark County, Washington, Sun, an expert in this work, will talk. Others will be A. E. Voorhies, Grants Pass; Elbert Beale, Cottage Grove; E. B. Aldrich, and Don Wilson, of Corvallis.

In the afternoon the publicity situation will be thoroughly gone over, following a talk by Don Sterling, managing editor of the Oregon Journal, who will speak on the topic, "Present Tendencies in the Free Publicity Situation." "Working Up Local Advertising" will be the subject of a talk to be given by Earl C. Brownlee, of the Forest Grove News-Times. The field agent project now under consideration by the Oregon State Editorial Association will also be discussed at this time.

Friday evening will come one of the features of the session, when the conference meets at its annual banquet. Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University, O. H. Brookhagen, of the Portland Telegram, and others will give talks on the program. Some real lively discussion is expected from Mr. P. O. Riker, publisher of the Hubbard Enterprise. Miss Ruth Newton, senior in journalism at the University, has been selected to speak for the students at this event. The Eugene Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the banquet.

David Faulkes, manager of the mechanical department of the Oregonian has at last consented to appear as a speaker, and has chosen for his topic, "Oregon Papers as They Appear to an Old Timer." This is expected to be one of the most interesting talks on the program, and will have a prominent place Saturday morning. Saturday afternoon the session will be divided into departmental groups, which will meet separately. Students of the University school of journalism are also planning several interesting features in connection with the conference, it is stated.

OREGON'S OPPORTUNITY TO DO THE BIG THING

The physicians of Oregon are custodians of the health of over eight hundred thousand of Oregon human beings. They are pretty good at repairing and curing defective and diseased individuals. But what do they do to prevent disease and the development of defects? Preventive medicine, the science that seeks to prevent disease, hardly exists. The eleven hundred physicians in the state of Oregon could, if properly educated and financed, do more to insure health, wealth, and happiness to the residents than any other profession. The physicians are the guardians of the health of the people, but neither the people nor many of the physicians realize their importance to the economic welfare of the country. Preventive medicine as an aid to keeping well is yet in its infancy, and very little has been done to make effective known means of disease prevention. The main object in life should be to prevent disease rather than to cure it. The one is easy and cheap, and the other expensive and often impossible.

The examination of drafted men in the World War showed that 47 per cent were defective from a military standpoint. Approximately $5,000,000 worth of life insurance applied for in 1923 was rejected by the insurance companies because of the various defects found among applicants. The condition of children appears to be quite as serious. Fifty to 98 per cent, varying with the locality, have decayed teeth; 30 to 40 per cent have diseased tonsils; and 25 per cent have impaired vision. There are approximately 6,000 tubercular persons in the state of Oregon.

The economic cost of disease involves figures quite beyond comprehension. The cost of disabling diseases in this state is over $12,000,000 annually. Approximately over $4,000,000 is being spent each year for drugs alone. Decreased efficiency due to disease increases a toll upon industry of about $12,000,000 annually. To a large extent these losses are preventable. The prevention of disease is the most important problem of civilization, and all that is needed for the solution is sufficient funds to payments that will make modern measures of disease prevention effective.

The Letter Box

Beaverton, Ore., Jan. 8. Mr. Editor: The cartoon printed in your paper Friday, Jan. 6th, by one Albert T. Reid, is a downright insult to every naturalized American in this community, because, if the imported citizens and their immediate offspring should be taken away, there would be hardly anything left to shoot at. The whole thing savors too much of the "I thank Thee, My Lord; that I am not like..." etc. But the whole thing seems to be in order, considering that we live in the age of the "High Priestess Aimee" and the age of monthly and weekly revivals.

Private gunting has been glorified in this country, more than any other place on earth. The single-handed bank or train robber, and various sorts of lynchings are a typical American product. Discussing a train robbery by a lone bandit, some years ago, with an old-fashioned Yankee, I made the foolish remark that this would be impossible in Switzerland. (I am handicapped by having been born in that alien land.) "Simply because the whole Swiss nation is not able to breed a man with sufficient courage to do it," said the Yankee, proudly.

Our American forefathers amused themselves for decades with private gun toting. On no other place on earth were "trigger games" so popular. If it is true that chickens come home to roost, we have an explanation for all this gunting that would satisfy a Lombardi.

The alien may do his share, but the James boys, Tracey, Shaw, and of late, Hickman, do not sound very alien, or do you want to credit our Canadian brothers or our English and Irish cousins with originating these guntoters?

The names of McGray, Stephenson, Duvall of Indiana fame, Sinclair, Fall, and Doheny of national reputation, sound very much like home products. Those gentlemen have reached a high mark of civilization (by no means the highest—they got caught), where no gun is needed for a hold-up.

Concerning more rigid immigration laws, I think our "official" gunting in alien lands will do more to keep the much dreaded alien gunman from our shores than a new law would. I cannot help but wonder what the Nicaraguan thinks of alien gunmen.—R. Schuepbach.
