LETTERS

From Our Readers

On Thursday night April 18th Mr. and Mrs. Hedge returned from an extended trip thru California.

We left Beaverton March 22 making Grants Park our first stop, tho we encountered much rain and snow in the Mts. of southern Ore.

The second day we crossed the Si-kiyou Mts. tho there had been seven inches of snow the night before.

On the evening of the second day we arrived at our daughters, near Chico, Zola as she is known here, who has bought a chicken ranch and has 4000 baby chicks. She is married and seems healthy and happy with bright prospects ahead. Her place is one and one half miles from Chico, on a paved highway. Chico is a beautiful city of about 1000 inhabitants, one hundred miles north of Sacramento.

After a few days rest we drove to San Francisco, getting there Saturday afternoon April 6th in the thickest part of the jam, and I did not enjoy driving there, however we found our daughter Marjory, who took us in charge and drove us over the city in her Master Six Buick and the traffic jam did not bother her.

On Tuesday April 9th we drove down the Coast route to Paso Robles, where we stopped over night with friends. On Wed. the 10th we went on to Los Angeles, going thru many beautiful cities, including Santa Barbara, Ventura and others.

On Saturday the 13th we started South first stop being Whittier, where we found Bud and John Huster at the station waiting on their many customers for gas and oils.

These two Beaverton boys certainly made no mistake in their selection not only for a good business point but a beautiful city in which to live. We reached Los Angeles O. K., and following Saturday followed coast route to San Diego and on Sunday to Tia Juana, Mexico. My impression of Mexico is not the best. All manner of gambling and drinking wide open. It was my first trip out of U. S. and will probably be my last. The government inspectors at our line asked three questions, viz., our nationality? Any Mexican goods and any bottle goods?

We got back to Long Beach for supper, and got on to L. A. Sunday night. On Tues. we headed north over interior or ridge route, getting into Yosemite Park, on Wednesday p.m., and stayed in the ranch over night, costing $14.00 for double cabin and beds for four.

The floor of park had 6 inches to 12 inches snow, but the grandeur of the scenery is indescribable.
There were scores of deer that would eat out of our hands. There were not so many bears, and we did not try to get on so back to San Francisco Saturday evening after a wonderfully interesting trip. Following Tuesday drove our own machine back to Chico, thence on north to Beaverton.

General Observations Many beautiful places south of San Francisco, and still more south of Los Angeles. Numerous places have roads skirted with beautiful palm trees and the oranges and lemon groves make a picture that is hard to describe, and every indication points to prosperity. In the vineyards around Bakersfield, Tulare and Fresno it don't look so good. It was a most wonderful trip, but I believe if made one month later, would be better. I have been in Oregon since 1887, and am content to stay 40 years more.

C. E. Hedge.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Weston Hall and son, Weston, and daughter, Miss Eveline Hall and Mrs. Mable Hall-Smith all of Portland spent Sunday afternoon and evening with their old friends, Mr. and Mrs. E.
L. Cox.

Everyone is invited to attend the session of the quarterly conference of the Evangelical churches in this district to be held at the Kinton Church Friday evening, (tonight) at 7:30. Presiding elder, Rev. F.
B. Culver of Portland will be present to address the meeting. All members of the church are urged to be present.

The scholars from Kinton school who were in the declamation contest sponsored by the Washington county teacher's association, held in Forest Grove Friday afternoon were as follows: Division I, Humorous, Eunice Snider and Harry Ludwig; dramatic, Lucille VanHorn and Lois Bierly; Division II, Evelene Young their teacher, Mrs. Harriett Ford, and some of the parents accompanied them on the trip. There were no winners among the Kinton students but all did their part well and enjoyed the contest. There was no session of the primary grades Friday afternoon.

Mrs. L. V. Tozer, teacher of the upper grade, was in an automobile accident Friday morning. She was quite badly shaken up and cut by glass, but no bones were broken.
Consequently, there was no school in her room, Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Helmholtz and family of Salkum, Washington, and Mr. Edgar Whitcomb of Onalaska, Washington, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hulet.

The line "Man wants but little here below" must have been in the mind of the designer who made up those new Spring garments we are seeing.

If anyone suggests it, we're sure Mayor William Hale Thompson will change his name to Hall William Thompson!

vestigators do for a living?

How to Raise Poultry

By Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S.
St. Louis, Mo.
Dr. LeGear is a graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College, 1892. Thirty-six years of extensive practice in diseases of live stock and poultry. Eminent authority on poultry and stock raising.

ARTICLE II

"Youth will be served" so runs the old proverb. Of course, no reference to poultry was intended, but it happens to fit just the same. As a rule, pullets lay more eggs during their first laying season than during any subsequent season. Consequently, if hatches are correctly timed so that plenty of pullets will be brought to maturity some time during the latter part of August or September, a banner winter egg season is bound to follow. Pullets hatched during February or March, according to breed, should begin laying just about the right time for winter eggs.

Pullets should not be allowed to come into maturity too quickly. Normally, a pullet starts to lay eggs as soon as she has reached maturity and her body has ceased to grow.

Sometimes laying starts some what before full growth has been reached and further growth may cease. Such pullets may remain under-sized and their eggs may be defective and small. If pullets are maturing too rapidly their mash and animal food should be reduced. The grain ration may also be slightly increased, as pullets should have a good reserve store of body fat before they start laying. Otherwise they will not stand up well under the strain of laying, and may fall considerably short of the possible maximum egg production. For that reason, many poultry men make a marked increase in the quantity of grains fed to the pullets as their combs begin to redden. At the same time they cut down on the mash and animal food; beef scraps or similar material. The grain is fattening, where as the animal food, being no longer required for muscle building as the birds reach maturity, may start egg production before it is desirable.

It is usually considered better not to force pullets into premature laying by feeding large quantities of mash. Instead, limit the mash until pullets are quite ready to lay and, by feeding a greater amount of grain, to get them fat. Such a ration emphasizes the fat making material and, by withholding the egg-making materials, removes the danger of a too early maturity.

Mash should not be entirely eliminated, as it contains materials needed for building up the muscles of young fowls. Too much of it, however, may precipitate egg laying before it is desirable. Give the developing pullets all the grain they will eat during early fall and after they come into normal laying, gradually decrease grain with a corresponding increase in mash feeding.

If pullets have been properly developed along the lines just described above, they should begin laying just as they are put in winter quarters. Their quarters should not be changed after they start laying. Such a change will usually cause a molt and falling off in the egg yield. Furthermore, pullets should never be housed with older hens. The more mature hens annoy the younger ones and that too interferes with their laying.

From this point on, the usual rules for feeding and handling laying hens will apply to pullets developed especially for winter egg production.

Of course, I do not mean that older hens are incapable of winter egg production merely because I have emphasized the desirability of developing pullets for that season.

With proper culling, breeding and feeding, hens can be made to lay almost as many eggs during the winter months as in warmer weather. The subject of special feeding and handling of fowls for winter egg production is, however, of sufficient importance to constitute a separate article all by itself.

The reason for emphasizing ways of increasing winter egg production is, of course, that prices reach their very highest peak at that time. It is, therefore, desirable not only to produce as many winter eggs as possible, but of those that are produced, then. Practically all of them can be marketed by preserving and keeping for home use the low priced eggs of spring and summer.

It is very easy to preserve eggs for winter use, by putting them down in water glass, a syrupy liquid that can be obtained from almost any drugist. This water glass should be mixed with nine parts of cold boiled water and the solution kept in stone jars or crocks.

Kegs or barrels may also be used if absolutely clean and free from odors provided they are thoroughly scalded. Fill the jar or keg partly full of the water glass solution and put in the eggs from day to day as they are gathered. Be sure there is always at least two inches of solution over the eggs. No dirty or cracked eggs should be used nor any about which there is any doubt as to when they were laid. They must be absolutely fresh, laid the same day they are put in the solution.

The cost of preserving eggs in this way is very small and calls for almost no work at all. Eggs in water glass will keep for six or eight months, well covered, and may then be used for all cooking purposes or for the table. The advantages of this plan certainly will be apparent without argument.

HOME POINTERS

If a small amount of vinegar, approximately three tablespoonsful, is poured over a tough roast before putting it in the oven, the meat will require less cooking to become tender.

Cream of tartar added to cooked frosting will keep it from sugaring.

If the skins of baked potatoes are cut open or pricked with a fork when they are first taken from the oven, the potatoes will not be soggy.

Scalding the milk that is used in bread making will lessen the chances for souring or of an off flavor in the bread.

Experiments show that cooked, whole cereals are better than refined or prepared cereals for the child's breakfast as they contain more minerals, and furnish the needed hot dish.

To have a variety of dishes, many women have found it valuable to keep a scrapbook of recipes, clipped from magazines and newspapers.
