IT ALL DEPENDS

(From a well known trade paper)
Rich soil, in good producing condition is necessary to secure a large yield of root crops in Oregon, finds the experiment station. Applications of 20 to 40 tons of barnyard manure an acre are not uncommon, and the crops are in such cases often grown on the same land several years in succession. Cost of handling makes it desirable to produce this heavy yielding, water crop fairly close to the place where it is to be stored. Commercial fertilizers, particularly superphosphate in the coast region, helps to secure a larger yield of roots.

Powdery mildew of grapes, which is seriously cutting down the production of grapes in smaller plantings in Oregon is easily controlled, says the experiment station. As the fungus is confined to the outside of the grapes and the leaves, sulfur dust applied at frequent intervals during the growing season will prevent the development of mildew. Best results are obtained by beginning the treatment early in the season, destroying the fungus before it becomes visible or does any damage. The treatment is repeated at 10-day intervals to keep the growing parts covered with the dust.

That most consistent results in potato seed disinfection have come from the use of corrosive sublimate are the findings of the Oregon experiment station, and experienced growers are now inclined to use this method in preference to any other. While hot formaldehyde is effective in killing Rhizoctonia on the surface of tubers, the heating of the solution is usually considered too inconvenient, and cold formaldehyde is not effective, it is found.

HOME TOWN THOUGHTS

The people who see only the defects in their home towns, do not contribute any of the helpfulness necessary to remove those defects.

If you expect your home town to support you, you should help support it by buying your supplies here in Beaverton.

The salesman who can't talk aren't apt to get promoted much, and the business men who don't advertise don't usually get very rich.

A SLAM AT LEGISLATURE

Author Unknown
I've got a letter parson from
My boy away out West,
And my old heart is as heavy
As an anvil on my breast.
To think the boy whose future
I had once so brightly planned,
Should wander from the path of right
And come to such an end.

I told him when he left us
Only three short years ago,
He'd find himself a plowin' in
A mighty crooked row.
He'd miss his father's council,
And his mother's prayer, too;
But he said as how the farm was hateful
And he guessed he'd have to go.

I know there's big temptations
For a youngster in the West,
But I believed our Billy had
The courage to resist.
And when he left I warned him
Of the even wakin' mare,
That lie like hidden serpents
In life's pathway everywhere.

But Bill, he promised faithful
To be careful, and allowed
That he'd build a reputation
That would make us mighty proud
But it seems as how my counsel
Sort of faded from his mind,
And now he's got in trouble,
Of the very worstest kind.

His letters came so seldom that
I somehow sort of knowed
That Bill was a plowin'—
In a mighty rocky road;
But never once imagined
He would bow his head in shame
And bring disgrace
To his old Daddy's honored name.

He writes from out in Denver—
And the story's mighty short;
I just can't tell his mother,
It would break her poor heart.
And so, I reckon, parson,
You might break the news to her—
Bill's in the legislature,
And he doesn't say what fur.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR

ADVERTISEMENTS PAY

Few merchants really have the proper appreciation of what advertising means to them. A writer in an exchange aptly puts it this way: If a man spoke to his wife only once a month or every two months she wouldn't even recognize his voice. Yet some men advertise once a month or every two months and then wonder why they don't get more business. Advertise every week. Remember "the used key is always bright." The store that tells the public what it is doing regularly, is the store that gets there in the end.—New Bethlehem (Pa.) Leader.

Andre Tardieu had his nose punched by his foe in a debate at Belfort, France, the other day. If this sort of things keeps up we may begin to expect a livelier public interest in affairs of state!

A poet typist has swum the Strait of Gibraltar. Now watch the type-writer companies seeking endorsements. "My work on the Tiptapper machine," we will read, "prepared me for any hardship in making my journey."

Malnutrition and Disease Combattd
By Balanced Diet and Care of Food

By FRANCES GIBBS DUNCANSON

Down the years from the dark ages mankind has groped blindly for weapons with which to battle disease. Amazing progress has been made. The great plagues and scourges—yellow fever, small-pox, diphtheria and scarlet fever—have been conquered by medical science. In this battle of mankind against deadly germs sanitation has played a vital part. This is particularly true as concerns the food supply. It accounts in large measure for the steadily falling mortality rate among children.

"Malnutrition stunts the development of a child," says C. U. Williams, Bloomington, Ill., manufacturer of the Williams Ice-O-Matic electric refrigerator. "The most common cause of malnutrition is a faulty diet. Improper food, unprotected from germs, causes more illness than is generally suspected. No asset in life compares with the health of child or adult.

"The mother's job is a scientific one today. Study of home economics has made her a serious student of health, nutrition and proper preparation of foods. And electric refrigeration has contributed in large measure to the health quota of the entire family. Milk, which children need in abundance, vegetables, fruits, eggs, butter and all those body-building foods rich in vitamins and calories are kept pure and fresh in the Ice-O-Matic which maintains a temperature of 46 degrees or less. These insidious little invaders, bacteria which take their toll in warmth and moisture, are inactive at this even, ice-cold temperature. The Ice-O-Matic is the family fortress of health.

"Not only does electric refrigeration keep the baby's milk as near its original wholesome state as is possible, but so many delectable, health-giving dishes can be prepared with little trouble that the entire family's appetite is improved. Tempting salads and delicious desserts are on the daily menu. Sparkling ice cubes, either small size or large, are frozen quickly, insuring pure drinking water at all times."

The Secret Of How To Be Well Dressed

The first step towards smartness is to know yourself. The well dressed woman studies her type and her coloring, just as she studies the gown she wears. She chooses only the hues that are flattering, lines that give grace to her figure, and details that best express her personality. The days when women were dependent entirely on the saleswoman are gone forever. Thanks to a brilliant stylist of New York City, Miss Marie Dunn of L. Mittleman & Company, a scientific analysis of the feminine figure with special reference to the couturier's needs has been made. If you would like a chart of how to ascertain your correct size, one will be mailed to you gratis if you will write.

Beginning at a point on the section line twenty six and two-thirds (26 2-3) rods west of the southeast corner of Section Twenty two, Township one south, Range two, west of the Willamette Meridian; then running north one hundred and twenty (120) rods to a point; thence west twenty six and two-thirds (26 2-3) rods to a point; thence south one hundred and twenty (120) rods to the south section line of said section twenty-five; thence east on said section line twenty six and two-thirds (26 2-3) rods, to place of beginning containing twenty (20) acres more or less situated in the County of Washington, State of Oregon.

—Attest: F. W. Livermore, Jr., District Clerk.

But the HomePaper Told It!

"Wasn't it fine about Priscilla getting honors in her school work last term?" said Mrs. Smith to Mrs. Brown.

"What?" asked Mrs. Brown. "I didn't know about it."

"But it was in the Home Town Paper," replied Mrs. Smith. "Don't you take it?"

"No," said Mrs. Brown, "but I am going to."

And she did, for this is a true story.

As much a part of the community life as is the school or church is the Home Town Paper.
