AS NIGHT DESCENDS

As night in majesty descends
From out the space-awful vault of blue,
Now, darkening into purple, blends
Myriads of stars gleam softly into view.
As night, courageous night, descends,
Dark power with beauty interwove,
Strong as the deathless loyalty of friends,
Deep, fathomless, as all enduring love.
As night, inspiring night, descends,
Life's meaning in its might is sought,
The mind day's fettering confine rends,
Eerne upward on the chainless flight of thought.
As night in mystery descends,
With shadowy deep unfolding wings,
Dark over all pulsative bends
The mystic spirit of unfathomed things.
As night, enchanting night, descends,
Faintly of dead days to being start,
With necromancy that the fond hour lends—
Reblossoms the faded blossoms of the heart.
As night, peace giving night, descends
With velvet vestments soft unfurled,
O'er the tired earth fond slumber bends,
So thing the fevered heart-beats of the world.

School Bond Election Carries by big Majority

Board Expects To Add To Number Class Rooms In Present Building

OLD GYM MADE OVER

Two Hundred Thirty Two Vo'e Ye
One hundred Forty One, No.

What is probably the best news that can be told is that the $30,000 school bond election carried and Dr. Mason was re-elected as a member of the school board. The one is a corollary of the other.

This bond issue has been the source of considerable strong feelings, some being expressed publicly and some kind of smothered under the breath. One fellow went so far as to charge unfair practices and the charges got into print. "But there was, to the close observer, only strong convictions registered, some times in trying to get others to come to similar conclusions.

"Can you pay debts by going further into debt?" Well, there are times when "It pays to go into debt." This is only one of a series of questions that were asked, and given some sort of answer. But the answer that talked was the vote, 231 to 141.

Beaverton is a place, like many a place in this great republic of ours, where it is difficult to get the expression of a majority. We have to see voices counted that on the face of them show that they register the convictions of, not the majority, but an organized minority. The first bond election was an instance. The majority were not organized. They thought that the bonds would carry and did not take the trouble to go to the polls to vote.

As stated in the communications section in the different articles in this review, this bond issue will be used to build an addition to the present school building and to provide a number of extra classrooms in the present building. The old gymnasium will be used for domestic science. The manual training department will be in the new addition. The cafeteria and the present manual training room will be used for class rooms, two of which will be for the grade school this year and two more will be fitted up to be used when they are needed.

The west upper story of the present building will be remodeled with classrooms on the north of the hall similar to those on the south. The plans for the new structure have not been completely worked out yet but will be at the next board meeting. These will be discussed later.

Camas-Washougal Club Puts on Program

Beaverton Club Holds A Business Meeting After Their Visitors Depart

MEET NEXT MONDAY

Ladies Of The Beaver Social Club
Will Seve When Tillamook Comes

The Kiwanis club held their usual meeting at the Commercial hotel the evening being in charge of the Camas-Washougal club from Washington. There was a very splendid speech made by Mr. West, the chairman of the Camas-Washougal club's agricultural committee.

The speaker took for his topic, "Some ways we have kept our club alive." There is no doubt in the minds of those who were fortunate enough to be present at the meeting that the visiting club is alive.

The president of the visiting club stated that more than half of their club consists of one member. This member, he stated was the accompanist. Truly their piano player was a considerable part of their club in more ways than one. The solos given, the duets, in fact the whole of the musical program was under her supervision.

After the visitors had departed Beaverton members remaining had a special business meeting. At that time they decided to hold their next week's meeting Monday evening, "All-Kiwanis" night. At that time the Tillamook club will be present and it is expected that plates will be laid for one hundred.

The ladies of the Beaver Social Club will put on the spread which will be served in the Masonic hall next Monday evening.

Just another thought: Here is a copy of a song sung to the tune of "Yankee Doodle" by the visitors. Try it yourself and see how it goes. Oh Beaverton is some fine town, Your fellowship's upon us; We meet and greet and how we eat Because we're in Kiwanis. Beaverton is some fine town Your ties are hard to sever Kiwanis here is right good cheer We'll think of you forever.

ANITA PAGE and RAMON NOVARRO
in "THE FLYING FLEET"

"FLYING FLEET" IS TRUE TO LIFE

Navy's Colorful "Suicide Squadron" To Show at Beaverton Theatre Next Sunday

Navy planes in thrilling gyrations and sensational feats in the clouds, a glorious love story told to an accompaniment of the throbs of hundreds of pianes in a great adventure, all are in "The Flying Fleet," Ramon Novarro's new starring film for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which will open at the Beaverton theatre Sunday, June 23rd.

The play is a vivid and intimate "inside" view of life with the aviators in the navy, flying in battle formation, and aboard the great air-plane carrier ships. The thrills include some of the most desperate tricks of the air, by the navy's famous "suicide squadron." A wreck and rescue at sea in a transoceanic flight is another remarkable bit of photography.

Through the thrills runs a love story, and the record of a steadfast friendship of a group of young officers, who graduated together from Annapolis and follow the lanes of the air.

Directed by George Hill, director of "Tell It to the Marines" and "The Crossacks," the picture was made with the cooperation of naval aviation officers.

The story opens at Annapolis, showing the group of youngsters whose friendship in high adventure whose is the keynote of the story. They go into aviation, one falls, another is lost, and the love of a girl severs the friendship of two of them—until danger calls and enemies are forgotten in a thrilling and dramatic rescue.

"Tommy," the young naval flyer, has a role that fits him as cleverly as the neatly-tailored uniforms. Novarro had to learn to fly for the picture, and did so well enough to give a good account of himself with the seasoned experts of the navy.

Anita Page, the most discussed young actress of the past year, is the heroine of the new story, and Gardner James, Eddie Nugent, Ralph Graves, Carroll Nye and Sumner Getchell are the "pals" in the Academy. The story was scenarized by Richard Schayer.

CARS ARE STOLEN DURING THE WEEK

Last week seemed to be the time for reporting stolen cars. I. G. Rogers reported to N. J. Skee that his car was stolen. The car, it is developed, was in a garage where it had been taken by a so-called friend, or rather the friend had been arrested for driving while drunk and the police had towed the car to a garage.

Just about the time that the car was reported as having been recovered, Leonard Adams, salesman for the local Chevrolet Agency, came to Skee, the insurance man and reported that J. Scott, who lives out of Beaverton on a rural route, had misused his car from where it had been left on Seventeenth St., North in Portland.

Dr. Mason Elected For Three-year Term

Clerk's Report Read And Accepted With But A Very Little Comment

OPPOSITION INVISIBLE

Francis W. Livermore Elected Clerk
For The Term Of One Year.

At the annual school meeting held at the high school auditorium Monday evening this week Dr. Mason was elected to succeed himself as school director for the next three years and F. W. Livermore, Jr. was elected clerk for one year.

The clerk's report was read and accepted with scarcely a question though Mr. Hedge did ask what the auditorium had been rented for which brought in ten dollars. The other question was on the segregation of the superintendent's salary mentary and part to the high school.

There had been some talk about town that there would be opposition to the re-election of Dr. Mason but it did not develop. When that order of business came, W. L. Cady store and with a short speech told of the work that had been done at the schools since Dr. Mason took hold some nine years ago, he placed the Doctor's name in nomination which was almost immediately seconded. Directly George Thyng arose and moved that the nominations be closed and that the clerk be instructed to cast the unanimous vote for the present incumbent.

The meeting was of short duration though it was attended by as large a crowd as at attended school meetings for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Webb were there from Cornelius where they are located for the summer looking after some of Mr. Webb's land.

LETTERS

From Our Readers

The Beaverton Kiwanis Club wishes to express its appreciation for the good work done by those who made the float a success.

There was a splendid advertisement for Beaverton, the beautiful lines of the structure represented the beautiful artistic ideas of the people that built it. The flowers represented the beauty of the land, the wonderful products for which we can feel justly proud.

But greater than the beauty of the lines, or the beauty of the flowers is the united spirit that was cemented into the structure of the float, the united spirit of achievement. It is glorified by this little illustration: Around the fountain of the float was a rocky, and rocky was made up of granite stone. Clastic stone was formed by layers of silt and sand that was washed from the higher levels to the lower levels and through the long ages cemented into stone so hard that it requires a sledge hammer to break it. So it is with Beaverton. In the three years that Beaverton has entered the contest with a float, the spirit of the peoples has been cemented together so firmly that it would also require a sledge hammer blow to break it. It is that spirit of stick-to-it-iveness for achievement together with the artistry and beauty woven into the float for which the Beaverton Kiwanis club feels grateful.

—F. J. Dietsch, Sec.-Treas.

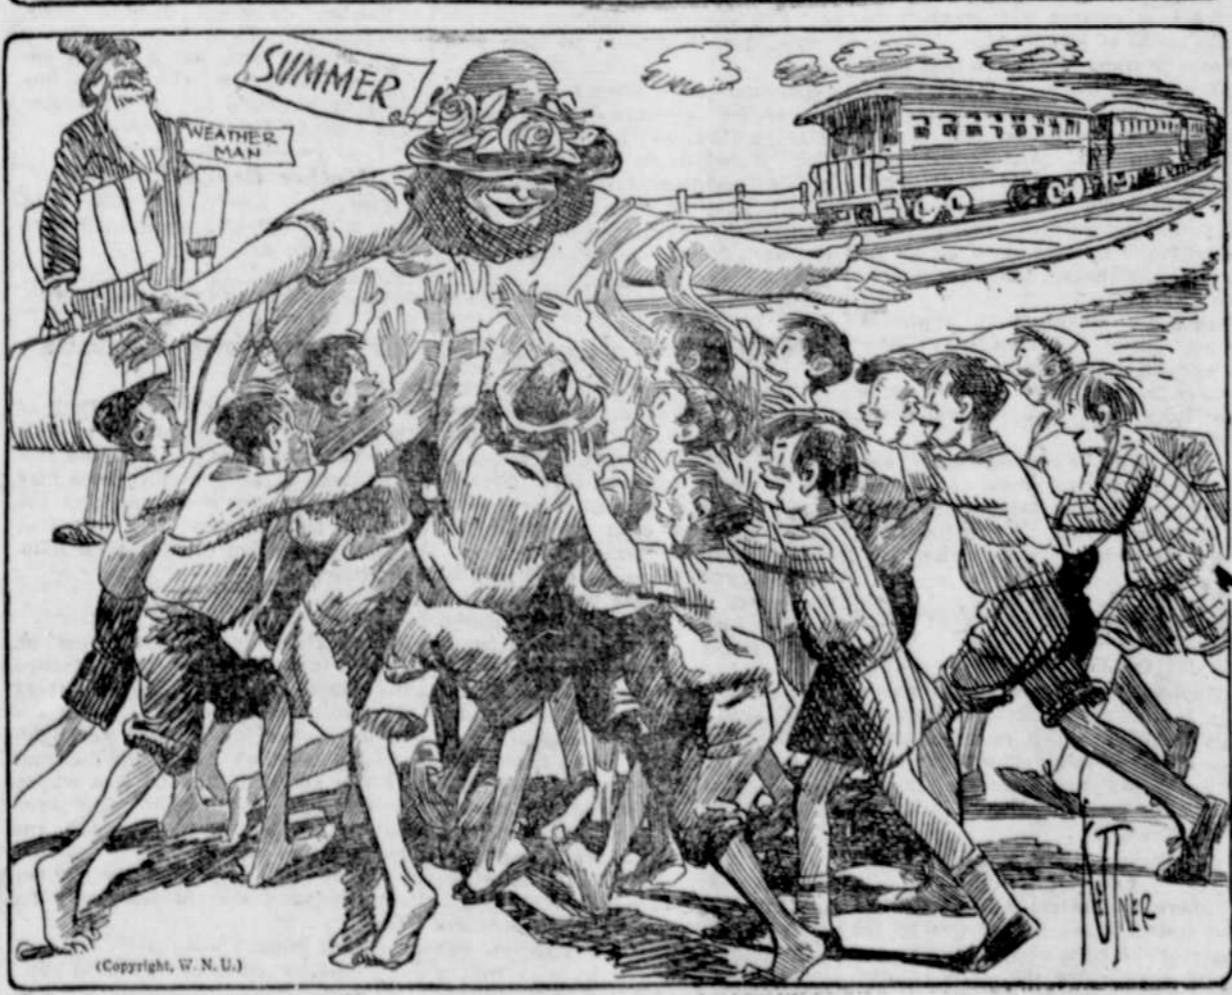

Mr. James Pinder, Pres. Beaverton Chamber of Commerce, Beaverton, Oregon
My Dear Mr. Pinder:

Sincerely yours,
J. C. PIER,
Director of Outside Participation.

Mr. Doy Gray, Cashier Bank of Beaverton, Beaverton, Oregon
Dear Mr. Gray:
On Monday, when viewing the floral parade in connection with the Portland Rose Festival, I was much impressed with the beauty of the Beaverton float and the aptness thereof in consideration of your local situation.
It is obvious throughout the coming years that Beaverton and all country between there and Portland is to become the attractive setting for many homes of this vicinity.
Wishing you and your community every success, I am,
Yours very sincerely,
W. A. HOLT, Vice-President, United States National Bank.

McWHORTER GIVES OUT SOME ADVICE

STRAWBERRY GROWERS
The smaller species of the strawberry root weevil has been found in the adult stage this past week, which means it is time to place poisons for this family of weevils. They are said to start laying eggs shortly after coming out as adult weevils, and in the beetle stage.
Bran baits or dried apple baits are used. Bran bait formulas can be obtained at the County Agent's office. Place about a teaspoonful of the bait in the crown of each hill of strawberries.
Look for adult beetles about the crown and just under the leaves at the base of the plants.
O. McWhorter County Agr'l Agent
