Issued Every Friday at Beaverton, Oregon.
THE REVIEW PUBLISHING CO.

FRIDAY, MAY 2, 1930

Entered as second class matter December 2, 1922, at the postoffice at Beaverton, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

J. H. Hueltt, Business Manager

It is vitally important that Beaverton obtain a full count in the present census.

Figures when they are announced will indicate trends of population. Concerns contemplating new locations are exceedingly interested in population statistics. Communities showing rapid growth are the ones that offer inducements to manufacturers and distributors.

Business leaders are urging that employers particularly see that all their workers are counted.

Anyone who has not been counted may call at the Bank of Beaverton where they can receive blanks to fill out.

FRIDAY

You might forget that you're alive—Forget where you have been—But you can't forget it's Friday—When there's egg on Casey's chin.

You might forget that you've a wife—Forget that you have kin—But you can't forget it's Friday—When there's egg on Casey's chin.

Now Casey was a righteous man—Whose soul was free from sin, And he never missed a Friday—With that egg upon his chin.

And if he stayed out late some nights—And took a drink of gin—He always knew when Friday came—For egg was on his chin.

I can't forget the day he died—And left this world of sin—I'm sure the day was Friday—There was egg on Casey's chin.

And when he reached the Heavenly gate, Saint Peter said "Come in; This very day is Friday—And there's egg upon your chin."

—Bilby Shakespeare

We have just received details of the tenth annual Citizens' Military Training Camp to be held at Vancouver Barracks, Wash., June 20 to July 19, and we are glad to commend this camp and the training offered to young men of this community, between 17 and 24 years of age, as being very worth while and desirable. Young men from all counties in the state will assemble on June 20 for a month of training in citizenship, military subjects, athletics, supervised sports and recreation, and will benefit physically and mentally.

Chaplain John W. Beard, Major, Chaplain's Reserve Corps, and pastor of Mount Tabor Presbyterian Church of Portland, will be responsible for the moral atmosphere of the camp, giving assurance that parents need feel no hesitancy about enrolling their sons.

Experienced army cooks will serve "mess" for the C. M. T. C., and this feature of the camp is a popular and beneficial one, judging from past records which show that candidates have made an average gain of six pounds during the 30 day period.

For young men who apply and are accepted the government pays all expenses, including travel cost, uniforms, shelter, food and all needed equipment while in camp. Applications should be sent at once to C. M. T. C. Headquarters, Vancouver Barracks, Washington.

Some of the highlights from the lives of Jason Lee, Marcus Whitman and other famous men of the early Oregon country are being recounted by Dr. J. B. Horner, professor of Oregon history at O. S. C., each Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. He speaks from KOAC.

FARM REMINDERS

In cases where it is desired to use commercial fertilizers for vegetable gardening, and no irrigation facilities are available, it is desirable to apply the fertilizer as early in the spring as possible so that it may become incorporated in the soil to be used through as much of the growing season as possible.

Plenty of succulent feed for the dairy herd means more milk in the pail and a smaller expenditure for the more expensive grain.

Sulfur is the best known single treatment for neutralizing alkaline soil and restoring the mellow soil structure so that reclamation can proceed.

The Hedlund Hatchery in Brownsville hatched 48,000 baby chicks.

The "Green Parrot" restaurant has opened for business at Gresham.

Andy B. Moore has purchased the Baldwin Hotel at Klamath Falls.

The airport at The Dalles was recently dedicated.

The new Clark and Wilson saw mill started operations at Linton recently.

The Rutherford building in St. Helens on the First Street has been remodeled.

Mr. and Mrs. E. English purchased Palm Cafe on Front Street, in Newport.

The Capitol Theatre at Multnomah is being remodeled and talkie equipment added.

Editor Beaverton Review

Beaverton, Ore.

Dear Editor:

In answer to your Editorial of April 19, 1930, "Wake up, Beaverton!" You say there is nothing the matter with Beaverton, and it is the inest place in the world.

So I find it just that very way: while a few of you good citizens are trying to make this a better community in which to live, of course for all us to enjoy, I find it a very good time to grab off a few more dimes as my business welcomes these floating coins. And if there was any chance of grabbing off some dimes at your Chamber of Commerce, I sure would be there on the job.

Now if anymore of the outside communities make further attempts on our Postoffice in Beaverton I might find time to do night duty in guarding the building as there is very little chance of grabbing dimes at that hour. Anyway my sympathy is with you boys for it must be a big job for such a few of you but you might have some good suggestions to offer me that I might be of service to the boys in blowing the fire siren or most anything that I could do without soiling my white collar.

Now I wish you good men all the success in the world and I am sure that if you succeed in making this a better town to live in I will get as much good out of it as you will. Let George do it.

—A Reader

Editor's Note—Our correspondent seems to think that here we are too busy "grabbing off dimes" to have time for the more altruistic occupations. Now, we do not think that the case for we do not find Beavertonians any stingier or more money chasers than most Americans. We are all out after the "coin of the realm" until the "Almighty Dollar" has become a characteristic expression. But is that the case here? No, we believe that "A Reader" will have to come again to get at the cause of the apathy.

HOME POINTERS

RHUBARB PUNCH

1 quart rhubarb
1 quart water
1-3 cup orange juice
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ cups sugar syrup
Few grains salt
1 pint mineral water
Cut rhubarb in small pieces, cook with water until fruit is soft. Strain through double thickness of cheese cloth, add orange juice, lemon juice, sugar syrup and salt. When ready to serve pour over a cake of ice in a punch bowl, add water and allow to get very cold.

In the absence of a mechanical slicer, hard boiled eggs can be sliced without cracking or crumbling by using a sharp knife dipped in hot water.

The delicacy of texture of angel food cake can be preserved by pulling the cake apart with two forks instead of using a knife. This also applies to sponge cake.

Smoking meat does not kill parasites.

Children who think they "don't like" milk can be given milk soups, custards and puddings with a milk basis, breakfast cereals cooked in milk, vegetables either cooked in milk or served with cream sauce, milk toast and other special dishes, thus getting their full quota of milk without fuss or coaxing.

A mixture of celery chopped fine and added to peanut butter or ground peanuts, with a little milk, makes a delicious sandwich filling, especially for whole wheat or gramham bread.

Bacon, fried crisp, broken into small pieces, and served on top of the chopped greens gives a delicious flavor and makes an appropriate garnish.

When a new food is offered to a child who is ill, angry, frightened, or otherwise emotionally upset, he often unconsciously associates the new food with the unpleasant situation.

How to Raise Poultry
By L. D. LeGear, V. S.
St. Louis, Mo.
Dr. LeGear is a graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College, 1905. Thirteen years of veterinary practice on diseases of live stock and poultry. Extensive authority on poultry and stock raising. Nationally known poultry breeder. Renowned author and lecturer.

A man fed from solid gold table service will be no better nourished than if his food were taken from dishes of the heaviest and cheapest earthenware, neither will he rest any better in a bed made of mahogany than he would in a bed made of pine. By the same token, poultry get along no better if raised with the aid of expensive devices rather than something far cheaper. As a matter of fact, homemade devices serve just as well in many cases as anything one can buy.

Of course there is ample justification for buying factory-made equipment made of such materials as galvanized iron or earthenware. As a rule, it is more sanitary, and also more durable. It is often essential, however, to keep the investment for equipment as low as possible. If so, the right kind of homemade equipment will serve just as well as the most expensive factory-made article. Moreover, with but little more effort, if any, it can be kept clean and sanitary. As an example, I have some nests made from ordinary soap boxes that have given satisfactory service more than ten years continuously.

Troughs, which are undoubtedly the most generally used of all feeding appliances, are also easily made by the home workman. A number of excellent factory-made troughs are also available if wanted. The familiar V-bottom trough made entirely of wood is, I believe, the most commonly used for feeding wet mash, as well as the easiest to build. It is very good, too, because feed cannot lodge in the corners. Whatever material or style of construction is used, a grating of some sort should protect the food so that the fowls can reach it easily, but cannot roost over it or get their feet in it. All feeding troughs and water vessels should be up off the ground or floor on platforms or racks, so the chickens cannot scratch litter and dirt into them.

The reel hopper is best for dry mash feed. This can be made by making an open box 12 inches wide, 7 inches high at each side, and any length required up to 12 or 14 feet. Have the ends of this box project up 7 or 8 inches and hang a reel in the center of these end pieces four inches square, which will prevent the chickens from roosting on it and will keep them from getting into the box or hopper with their feet and still permit them to eat the mash feed. On the top of each side, have a lip project into the box at least ½ of an inch. This will keep the chickens from wasting the feed. It should be upon a platform where the hens can jump up and eat from each side.

In addition to the various kinds of troughs and hoppers which can be of homemade construction, there are several very practical styles of homemade drinking equipment which are more or less satisfactory. Drink-in vessels should be made of tin galvanized iron, glass or crockery. A wooden vessel or trough is not easily cleaned or sterilized; therefore, should not be used for either water or milk. An ordinary pan, bucket, pail or can can be used for a drinking vessel, or excellent sanitary drinking fountains can be bought from any dealer in poultry supplies. If homemade equipment is used, be sure to protect it in some way so that fowls cannot get in the water with their feet or turn it over.

For watering poultry, the best plan is to build a platform 24 inches square and have it up 20 or 24 inches from the floor. Make a round hole in the center of this platform just large enough to let a tapered galvanized pail or bucket half way down in the hole, and the chickens can jump up on all sides of this platform to drink. A platform can be made 2 feet wide and 6 feet long, if desired to accommodate three pails. Plenty of pure, fresh drinking water should be available at all times, convenient for the hens to find.

Space is lacking to describe even briefly the various other accessories which may be desirable in the poultry yard. All of them may, as a rule, be made at home of simple material and at very little cost if so desired. Not only does the maker of such equipment effect a worthwhile saving, but I know from personal experience that he gets a whole lot of genuine, personal enjoyment out of making his own equipment. He has the additional satisfaction of knowing his percentage of profits will be greater because his investment has been kept as low as possible.

Governor

"I will enforce the laws with sincerity and justice and will appoint no man to enforce a law who does not observe the law."

"I will use ceaseless vigilance to prevent waste in state expenditures. I will be ready to spend a tax dollar for progress if convinced that the state will receive full value for it."

"I believe in the steady completion of our highway system. I shall continue to oppose interfering with the duties of the State Highway Commission for the purpose of logging. The state will pass the peak of its road bond retirement in 1932, and I hope that greater aid may then be given our program of market roads."

"If elected, I will not be obligated to make any appointment in return for political support."

"I will make every appointment on the basis of merit. I will work for the greater development and welfare of Oregon."

"These things I shall take upon myself as a serious duty and a solemn pledge to the people of the State."
