WHAT IS OUR JOB?

Do we often enough stop and think, "What Is Our Job?" Of course each of us has his own daily work but if we do not look beyond our own immediate job, it is pretty difficult to keep a proper balance.

We are engaged in the buying and selling of remedies, with the resultant transfer of merchandise. That is what makes up a part of the great system of distribution. But our real job is the transfer of medicines from the shelves of laboratories of the great manufacturing chemists to those in need of these goods throughout this country. That is our job. And unless that job is done so well as to satisfy the customer so that he either comes again when his supply of these goods has exhausted, or gets his neighbor to come to us for his supplies, there will not be any motive for us to go on supplying the needs of the community.

In other words, real service, the kind that we supply here comes only from "selling" the consumer, not for a single purchase, but for all time. If he gets it into his head that our service is uncommittal, that we are following in the way we should, he being a free moral agent

Jantzen's President Approves Low Oregon Power Rates

HORSE SENSE SERIES...NO. 1

JOHN ZEHNTBAUER has his feet squarely on the ground. He thinks straight—uses horse sense, in short. Thanks to him, Portland's name has gone round the world with "The suit that changed bathing into swimming." Here is what he thinks about the Oregon power situation:

"I guess our Jantzen plants use more electric power than the average industrial concern. We pay the same rates as the rest. And it amounts to a mighty little part of our expense. Now suppose we Oregon folks 'junk the power companies' and duplicate their plants. Who pays for the new plants? Or suppose we buy the power companies. Who pays the bill? Nobody but the Oregon taxpayers, of course. Would we get lower rates? How could we? The power companies take all the risks of the business, pay Oregon stockholders' dividends, pay huge taxes to Oregon governments, and still sell power for less in Portland than it costs users almost anywhere else in America!

"That takes mighty efficient management. No municipal plan could do any more. We all know that most of them don't do as well, even though exempt from taxes and paying no stockholders' dividends.

"We are trying to get more industries for Oregon and yet some thoughtless people would destroy one of our biggest industries by short-sighted legislative measures. Personally I want to see our public utilities regulated and controlled. They are willing to submit to that. It spurs them on to greater developments. They work with the rest of us to bring more people and more business to Oregon so they can continue to grow. Oregon needs their help.

"It's only plain good business to encourage them."

John Zehntbauer

Jantzen

What Oregon needs is a dozen trade-marks as famous as this! And more level-headed leaders like John A. Zehntbauer, Jantzen Knitting Mills' President, to speak their minds. Such men see through glittering "campaign promises" and realize that prosperity and opportunity are created by sound industries, well financed—not by the mere passing of laws.
