"WOLF" CRY OVERDRAWN Political attacks on industries and individuals have been carried to such an extreme that they are becoming ridiculous. If charges such as are continually made, were true, or only partially true, a majority of our leading business men and candidates for public office should be in custody. The public is nowhere near as dumb as a lot of would-be saviours of the people seem to think.

Love's Labor Not Entirely Lost

That I might be more graceful in your eyes. I did my daily dozen faithfully. Upon my face I lavished mud and cream. So it would be more fair for you to see; To have the slim physique that you admire. I spurned my mother's good but fattening cooking; And now, although you've left me, I confess You've helped me to become much better-looking! —Marion Koppell

OBEYED INSTRUCTORS

"Madam," said the conductor, "I am very sorry, but you can't have your dog in this car. It is against the rules. Dogs must ride in the baggage-car. I'll take and fasten him for you." "Don't you touch my dog, sir," exclaimed the young lady excitedly. "I will trust him to no one," and with indignant tread she marched to the baggage-car, tied her dog, and said: "Remember I don't want a soul here to touch my dog or untie him; you understand?" As the train approached her station the young lady said to the conductor, "is my dog all right?" "I don't know miss," replied the conductor.

"Don't know?" she replied. "Why don't you know? It's your business to know. You haven't touched him or untied him?" "No; we didn't touch or untie him, that's just it. You tied him to a trunk checked for two stations back. The trunk had to be put off, and the dog went too."

CAN A CHRISTIAN GO TO THE MOVIES?

NO! The Reverend W. E. Woodham Denham, vicar of Chorley Wood, Herts, speaking at Christ Church: "No Christian should go to the cinema. No truly converted person can sit and watch some of the films that are shown today. Anyone who does so is not a Christian, even if he has been going to church for forty or fifty years."

"Above all, I appeal to the parents not to allow their children to go to the cinema. It is their duty to see that children do not come under the destroying influence of the cinema."

YES! The Rev. E. E. Haring, Chaplain, Los Angeles Hospital:

"The benefits of motion picture shows have always been a source of satisfaction to me. Many a discouraged man or woman has taken a new hold on life after seeing a picture which occasioned a good laugh or gave a suggestion of courage or patience. My thirteen years experience in this great hospital (Los Angeles General) where more than 2,000 patients pass through its wards every 30 days has convinced me that music, flowers, and motion pictures, as well as medicine and religion, all have their place in the healing of the ill of life—mental, physical, and moral."

The Mazaroff Mystery by J.S. Fletcher. Illustrations by Jewett Myers. CHAPTER I Mr. Mazaroff

It was Dick Harker who first put me in touch with the man whose mysterious murder, while in my company, formed the basis of what came to be famous in three continents as the Mazaroff affair. Harker and I were old schoolfellows; we entered the army together as subalterns; we were in the same battalion throughout the great war, and we were wounded on the same day, and in the same scrap—a fortnight before the armistice; we were sent to the same home hospital and were eventually discharged from it at the same time, each unit for further military service, but fortunately in possession of our full complement of limbs. Harker walked into my rooms one morning while I was still at breakfast, and flung down a copy of the Times, indicating a blue-pencil advertisement in the "Personal" column.

"That's your job, Mervyn," he said in his usual direct fashion. "Get busy!" I took up the paper and read the advertisement before making any remark. "The advertiser, who has recently returned to England after a prolonged absence, and is desirous of making an extensive tour through the northern shires, in his private automobile, desires the company of a bright, sociable, well-educated, and well-informed young gentleman, preferably an ex-officer, inviolated out of the service. Applications, with full and precise details and references, to be addressed Box M. 5343, the Times, E.C.4."

I think it was more out of curiosity than anything that I replied to that advertisement, setting forth my qualifications and detailing my references. Yet I never expected any reply: I knew well enough that there were hundreds of men whose qualifications and references would be just as good as my own—why should I be singled out? It was therefore with a good deal of surprise that, about a fortnight later, I received and read the following letter:

"Hotel Cecil, "8th September, 1919. "My Dear Sir, I am much obliged to you for your letter of the 23rd August. I think you and I would get on together very pleasantly, and I shall be further obliged to you if you will call on me at this hotel tomorrow morning about half past twelve o'clock so that we may have a little talk. I remain, my dear sir, "Truly yours, "SALIM MAZAROFF."

I walked into the Hotel Cecil next morning at precisely twelve-thirty. Evidently Mr. Mazaroff had already given certain instructions about me, for as soon as I inquired for him, I, in my turn, was asked if I was Mr. Mervyn Holt, and on my assenting, was handed over to an attendant who whisked me off to a private—and palatial—suite of rooms. He installed me in an ante-chamber, tapped at an inner door, murmured my name to somebody within, closed the door, informed me that Mr. Mazaroff wouldn't keep me one minute, and went away. And I discovered at once that Mr. Mazaroff was really a man of his word, for before a minute had gone, the door opened again, and he stood there with outstretched hand.

I took a good look at him as I went forward. I judged him to be about six feet in height; his breadth corresponded; altogether he gave one the impression of bigness and solidity. His age it was difficult to estimate; his brown hair and beard were grizzled, and between his eyes and his mustache there was a good deal of seam and wrinkle; he looked like a man who has weathered storms, and been under fierce suns and driving winds. There was a distinctive air of good nature, good humor, even of benevolence, about him, but it was somewhat discounted by a long, sharp nose and close-set, small eyes, and further by a cast in the left eye. But his smile was pleasant enough; so was the twinkle of his eyes, and there was nothing cold nor formal about his handshake.

"Glad to see you," he said, almost brusquely. "I was certain that wherever or however Mr. Mazaroff had come by his un-English name, he himself was a Scotsman; there was no mistaking his accent."

DIVOT DIGGERS—Poorer But Sportier. WELL, MR. KEEFE, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF OUR AVALON COUNTRY CLUB—ISN'T IT A DANDY? YEAH, IT'S A ROY Y YOUR PRO, ROY SMITH WAS TELLIN' ME ITS HISTORY LAST NIGHT. IT'S THE RICHEST CLUB FOR ITS SIZE IN THE COUNTRY. THEY SAY THESE HILLS ARE FULL OF GOLD. IS THAT SO? WELL, OUR COURSE HOME HAS MORE HILLS— BUT THEY'RE FULLA MOLES.

HOME POINTERS Combination Fruit Conserve 2 pounds peaches 1 pound quinces 1 pound pears 1 cup nut meats 1 pound apples 2 lemons Sugar Peel, core and stone fruits. Cut into fine sections and weigh. To each pound of fruit allow 1/2 pound of sugar. Place fruit and sugar in alternate layers in preserving kettle and let stand for several hours. Slice lemons and add. Cook until mixture becomes thick. Add nut meats five minutes before removing from fire.

GINGER BREAD 2 cups sugar 1 cup butter 1 cup molasses 4 eggs 1 1/2 quarts flour 1 1/2 tablespoons soda 1 tablespoon ginger 1 tablespoon cinnamon 1 teaspoon salt 2 cups sour milk Cream butter and sugar; add well beaten eggs and molasses. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with milk. Bake in layer cake pans about 35 minutes in slow oven or about 325 degrees F. Cut in squares and serve with whipped cream.

VEAL DANDY 1 1/2 pounds veal steak Fat salt pork, cut in strips Squares of thin-cut bread Salt and pepper Sage Little water Put in a pan some butter, salt, and pepper, and a little sage (to give a suggestion of its flavor). Then place in the pan tiny strips of thin-cut fat salt pork, then veal steak cut thick, with bones removed. Season and add squares of thin-cut bread, season again and place more strips of pork. Add a little water. Start in a hot oven, then turn low. It should be a deep rose color when done, with no trace of pork remaining.

Seventy-five per cent of the wells in Oregon contain impure water, according to Professor J. E. Simmons of the Oregon State college bacteriology department. Two many wells are fed by a supply of surface water, which is usually impure, rather than ground water, which is purified by its passage through sand layers. The problem of water purification in Oregon is greater in the rural districts than in the cities. For this reason it is well for the farmer to take especial care in choosing the location of his well so that it may be the proper distance from all buildings.

DAIRYING By Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S. Dr. LeGear is a graduate of Ontario Veterinary College, 1892. Thirty-eight years of veterinary work. Extensive authority on diseases and raising of dairy cows and other livestock and poultry. Nationally known lecturer, writer and author.

(Continued from last week) Dairy products on the other hand take little from the fertility of the farm and the herds return in the form of manure the most valuable form of fertilizer we have. It is estimated that the value of fertilizer produced by an average dairy cow in a year's time is equal to about $28.00 in commercial fertilizer. If proper methods are employed, 80 per cent of the quantity of fertilizing element from farm animals can be saved and used.

An indirect benefit that comes from the dairy herd is the fact that its presence on the farm influences the yearly plan for crops. In grain raising, rotation of crops is necessary. Hay and silage which can be fed to the cattle, and which take their place in the cycle of crops, naturally are welcome. It seems to me that in this article and the one preceding it I have established a pretty good case for the farmer who includes the dairy cow in his program. First of all, milk is an essential food in our diet. Secondly, skim milk is the best food there is for poultry and hogs, also the dairy cow is a cheap producer of food, excelling the hen and the pig in this respect. And as I have attempted to demonstrate in the above, the dairy cow contributes very materially to the fertility of the farm land. When we have learned the value of natural fertilizer as the European farmer has learned it, we will place dairying in its proper place throughout agriculture.

GINGER PEARS 5 pounds hard pears 5 pounds sugar 1-3 cup preserved ginger, cut in small pieces 3 lemons, juice and grated rind 3 cups water Remove the skin and cores from the pears and cut the fruit in slices lengthwise. Add the water and cook the pears until they are tender. Add the sugar and the other ingredients and simmer the mixture until it is thick. Pour it into clean hot jars and seal. Hard varieties of apples may be preserved in the same manner.

An election was held to vote on the formation of a union high school at Gaston, to include five districts.
