SANCTUARY

When someone has slipped you a dirk in the dark, When eyes that are loving are lies; When someone you trusted has made you a mark, And somehow the heart in you dies; There's dirt for you, hurt for you, trouble enough To shatter the faith of a man;

But don't ever think there is trouble so tough That you can't overcome it-you can.

When living is losing its flavor to you When worry is making you old; when there is no joy in the thing that you do.

Nor truth in the thing you are told, There's balm for you, calm for you out in the wild, There's hope for you up on the hill;

Get up in the timber and play like a child; You can overcome it-you will.

Get up in the timber; the trail and the trees Will make you a man in a day.

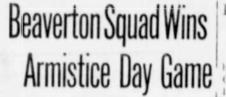

The smell of the soil and the breath of the breeze, Will blow all your troubles away.

There's pine for you, wine for you, hope for you there: The syn and the moon and the star-If the ways of the city are not on the square

Get up in the woods-where they are.

If there is one thing by which a chool's efficiency is judged more mickly than another it is the legibility of the penmanship produced, but the samples which we've seen posted in a number of the rooms indicate that adverse criticism cannot be made of our system in this respect. We especially call attention to the exhibits in the third, fourth, and eighth grade rooms.

The half ended with the ball within a foot or two of the center of the field. Forest Grove had completed one pass, and intercepted one Beaverton had attempted. Beaverton attempted two, one incomplete and one intercepted. And the ball had been right up to Beaverton's goal line twice but lost on downs.

The second half was different. Beaverton received and passed only to lose the ball by a bad fumble. But on almost the next play Al Wismer intercepted a long pass almost to Beaverton's ten-yard line, and he wriggled and shifted the ball to close to the center of the field. Another fumble looked bad but they held and got the ball. Penalized five yards for two incompleted passes they essaved a third and were penalizet again, and then another pass that looked as though it meant a score, but they were stopped about thirty yards back from the goal. Shannon carried twice to a first down and Brick Welch was given the ball and pway he went to the seven yard line.

A long mass failed but Wismer got around their left end for the score. They failed to convert. Forest Grove chose to receive and Shannon got away a long kick which almost got to the goal line but was stopped about a foot away. Forest Grove punted. Beaverton got the ball away down near their thirty-yard line and returned it about twenty-five yards. Then Beaverton shot a long hurt in the first few minutes of play, pass almost to the Forest Grove with a short second string of playgoal. A CORRECTION installation of Kinton and Scholls granges will be the third Saturday in January, the 17th of the month with Scholls grange instead of in December as announced in last week's paper.

In last week's Review we made an error counting the number of coupons on one issue of bonds which have been called. The totals given in error were for District No. 3, the interest should have been $145 on each called bond instead of $165 as printed. This brings the total down to $2,010.00 instead of $2,310.00 as stated, and the grand total of interest paid on called bonds to $2,895.09 instead of $3,195.00 We are pleased to have our attention called to this matter and to make this correction.
