Radio Reaches Out To Many Other Arts

In addition to transoceanic sea voice, radio now being developed as a point-to-point communication system, promises this year to add an element to the transcontinental telegraphic facilities of the United States, according to David Saroff, Executive Vice President of the Radio Corporation of America.

"Radio as a service to the home has been reaching out for association with other established arts of entertainment and education," Mr. Saroff says. "In the realm of musical and speech reception, in combination with the modern phonograph to render the two distinct services involved in broadcasting reception, on the one hand, and in recorded, selective programs upon the other, in the field of sound motion picture development, radio faces another season of progress.

"It includes in its scope both sound and sight, both color and perspective.

"It is the first system of communications that has largely removed the limitations of time and space from the distribution of music and speech; it promises eventually to transmit the spectacles of life by sight communication. No channel of transmission offers a greater field of expression to the entertainment art."

Japan's Fishermen Use Cormorants—Birds With Rings Round Their Necks So They Can't Swallow the Fish

Fishermen in various lands use all sorts of methods in their trade, but probably the most original and interesting is that of the fresh-water fisherfolk of Japan, the Land of the Rising Sun. These enterprising people employ trained cormorants—queer long-necked black birds capable of diving to great depths—and they see that their feathered fishers are constantly hungry so that they will show proper zeal in seeking their prey. To prevent the birds from swallowing the fish, their necks are bound by rings so that only the smallest specimens can pass through their artificiallynarrowed throats. By this means, nothing larger than a healthy sardine ever goes down the bird's throat. The fishermen go out in light boats, each manned by a team of two men. One handles the boat while the other looks after the diving birds. A cormorant tender handles up to a dozen birds by strings attached to the birds' necks, precisely as a marionette artist works his puppets. Cormorant fishing is usually done at night, but as the fish dislike moonlight, dark nights are chosen, and the fishermen work by torchlight. The exact date of the origin of this style of fishing is unknown, but it is believed to have existed a thousand years ago.

Japan is becoming more and more popular with winter travelers, and fine new steamers are constantly being built to accommodate them. One of the latest additions to the trans-Pacific fleet is the new 26,000-ton Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan, the largest and fastest vessel on the Pacific, which makes the run from Vancouver, via Honolulu, to Yokohama, in 14 days, thence proceeding to Kobe, Nagasaki and other Oriental ports. The Empress of Japan holds the blue ribbon of the Pacific, recently wrested from her running-mate, the Empress of Canada, by the fastest sailing time from Yokohama to Vancouver.
