ON OREGON FARMS

Corvallis—Kale has been found the most profitable succulent feed for dairy cattle in the Willamette valley, according to trials conducted at the Oregon State college experiment station. Results so far indicate that under valley conditions the most economical dairy ration includes succulence amounting to about three and one-half per cent of the body weight.

Dallas—Polk county dairy herds are almost completely free from tuberculosis, reports County Agent J. R. Beck, who says that practically every dairy animal in the county over one year old has been tested for this disease during the past two years and only one reactor found. Increased interest is also being shown in the eradication of infectious abortion, with a resultant decrease in the number of reactors to this test.

Canyon City—"A few gophers a day will put the time of reseeded away." This slogan, says County Agent R. G. Johnson, might well be adopted by numerous eastern Oregon ranchers whose alfalfa stands are rapidly being thinned out by gophers. The situation is serious and unnecessary, says Mr. Johnson, who points out that poisoning the gophers is an easy and inexpensive operation.

Oregon City—A silbert orchard on the C. A. Vonderhoe farm south of Oregon City produced only 4160 pounds per acre, even with the help of a rye and vetch cover crop. Nitrogen added to the soil failed to improve the yield, but nitrogen and phosphorus boosted the yield to 22,040 pounds per acre and the complete fertilizer made 24,960 pounds of green crop to plow under.

Hood River—Indications that the famous Hood River apples may in the not distant future give place to pears as a major crop of the county are found in summaries of an orchard census begun in 1930, by County Agent A. L. Marble. To date 408 farms have been covered, and a heavy trend toward pears has been found. Mr. Marble believes that pear shipments may exceed apples within a few years. Cherry planting has shown the greatest percentage increase.

INTEREST IN AUTO SHOWS IS INCREASED

Nearly 150 spectacular new motor cars, airplanes, motor boats and automotive equipment will be displayed at the 22nd Annual Northwest Auto show, to be held in Portland, February 6 to 13. Announcement of this show, which will dramatically express the fearless attitude of business toward 1932, was made yesterday by E. E. Cohen, president of the Automobile Dealers association of Portland, which sponsors this civic feature.

Public interest in motor shows this year, including New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and San Francisco, is evidenced by attendance increases ranging from 30 to 50% and more buying than in several years, according to Mr. Cohen. This increased interest is hailed with joy by business leaders who assert that it indicates a definite improvement in business conditions.

Automotive dealers throughout Oregon and Washington are vitally interested in the Portland show, not only because it is their industry's annual parade but because it is the kick-off for a season of business activity. A number of dealer-meetings will be held in Portland during show week, while the society of Automotive Engineers will stage its annual dinner on February 10, headed by noted speakers.

CO. SCHOOL DIRECTORS TO HAVE MEET

In order that the school boards might have a more general understanding among themselves as to teachers' salaries for the coming school year and general school finance, and for the discussion of a number of other school problems, a conference of all the directors and clerks of the schools of this county has been called for Tuesday, February 2nd, at 1:45 P. M. in the Circuit Court Room (third floor) of the county Court House in Hillsboro.

Frank Peters, a member of the Hillsboro School Board and Ferd Langer, member of Sherwood board, will give general talks. County Supt. Kraus has a number of matters also to explain to the school officers. There will be plenty of opportunity for open discussion for those present.

If it is impossible for all three members of the board of each district to be present, then an attempt should be made to have the clerk and at least one director from each district present. In that way each district will be able to get the benefit of this conference. Those directors who wish to invite other representative taxpayers should feel free to do so.

PRESS, SCIENCE BOOST INFANT INDUSTRY

How the press, the public, and science can combine to encourage an "infant industry" for Oregon has been demonstrated in the present efforts in behalf of the distinctive and valuable evergreen huckleberry of the coast region. Recently scores of weekly and daily papers carried an announcement from Oregon State college saying that Dr. George Darrow, federal small fruits specialist there, and the home economics extension staff were eager to get favorite recipes on ways to use these huckleberries.

The response was immediate, and within two weeks recipes had arrived for everything from variations of the conventional pies to concoctions that a few declared had high medicinal value. Several men wrote in that they have been convinced for years of the possibility of domesticating these berries and offered their accumulated experience.

The recipes are being tested now under the direction of Miss Claribel Nye, leader of home economics extension, and all who send recipes will receive copies of the best ones. She says that it is not too late for others to add their favorites.

HIGH VALUE OF O. S. C. PROPERTY SHOWN

Of the total contributed by the people of Oregon to higher education in this state, approximately $7,682,367 is still represented as material assets in the form of property under control of the Oregon State college alone, a recent inventory shows.

Most of this is invested in the Corvallis plant where buildings, equipment, apparatus and livestock are inventoried at $6,431,573. Land at Corvallis, including close to 200 acres inside the city limits, is valued at $760,711.

Included in the inventory of the Corvallis plant is the Memorial Union building valued at $615,764 which cost the state nothing, being built from funds contributed by students, faculty, alumni, and other friends. Inventory of land also includes 3040 acres of forest tracts given as gifts for the use of the school of forestry.

FARMERS' MEETING TO BE HELD SOON

On Monday evening February 1, the farmers and their wives are invited to meet at the Leedy Grang Hall at Cedar Mills for the purpose of organizing a local unit of the "Farmers Co-operative Union of America."

There will be speakers from Montana and other places where the "Farmer's Union" has been organized and is proving to be very successful and beneficial to the farmers.

The meeting begins promptly at 8:00 o'clock.

Dr. J. R. Talbert spent the week end with his mother at Marysville, Wash.

and cuttin' in and lettin' folks get their water without its gettin' through the meter. The editor dug around an' found where it said it was a crime to take water from pipes an' that water was property an' that anyone could be punished for larceny, whatever that is, for takin' water out of pipes. He advised me and her old man not to have anything to do with tapping pipes or getting water, I suppose goodness know that this town needs all it can get to pay for that Bull that run somewheres out of pipes or through pipes or anyway it got away an' now the fair Town o' Beaverton has to pay and they need the money."

Gossup looked around to see what effect his speech had produced on his little audience. W. Cracker then asked if the District Attorney had done anything.

"Just as soon as he got wind of what that editor had printed he called up an' wanted the City Dads to come down and they did again and then he preached awhile about how he wanted to do every thing he could to enforce the Law and he then had them come before the grand jury and tell everything they knew, as if that could straighten matters out any. Well they went, and that is about all so far as the fellows who were then on the council. The new council has hired special investigators who have interviewed a good many people here and what he got hold of is more than I have been able to find out.

"I heard a lot of fellows on the street say that if they who were talking had done things like what has been done, they, the talkers would be in jail pronto. 'Eut,' they say, 'they wont be nuthin' done, just you see,' an' now dont it look like they were right?"

"Supposing they do get a true bill from the grand jury and get a man sent up, just what good is it going to do anyhow?" and W. Cracker looked about from one to the other as though expecting to see looks of acquiescence on every face.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hughson were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richards of Portland were visitors at the J. D. Wilnot home on Sunday. Mrs. Richards is a cousin of Mrs. Wilnot.

Fiction of Dash and Thrill—New Serial for The Beaverton Review

This Is One of the Jobs That Fame Brings

Now wouldn't you like to be singing, he is one of Broadway's reigning theatrical and radio stars. He is, as the New York Telegraph says, "the boy who went over with a bang with his peculiar style of singing songs by tumbling from bar to bar in a pleasing exhibition of vocal musical gymnastics."

If such musical success is apt to give one so pleasant a job as judging beauty contests, we predict an unusual increase in the ranks of musical gymnasts.
