Composed especially for the
GEORGE WASHINGTON
BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

Wash-ing-ton, A song of love that reach-es near and far; heart and soul, A pa-tri-ot-ic something seems to say;

CHORUS

First in War, first in Peace, First in the hearts of his coun-try-men That is the sto-ry of Wash-ing-ton, That is the glo-ry of Wash-ing-ton, His spir-it is here, His stand-ing, com-mand-ing a-bow In word and deed we fol-low the lead, of the Fa-ther, Of the land we love, live.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Mrs. Manie Downing is reported on the sick list.

Mrs. Timmer is still in Portland attending her daughter, Mrs. Vin-ton, who is ill.

Jack Marsh, who has been quite ill at his home for the past two weeks, is back in school again.

Elizabeth Huff spent the week-end at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Huff in Progress.

Mrs. W. H. Skidmore of Portland, who formerly resided in Beaverton, was in town last Saturday looking after her property on Lombard St.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Price of New-berg were in town Saturday. They formerly lived in Beaverton on the Canyon Road.

A large crew of men are em-ployed at the S. P. tracks, giving them an overhauling, between Beaverton and Oswego.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Carr are re-ceiving congratulations on the ar-rival of a baby girl, born Saturday morning. This is their second daughter.

Mrs. Ruby Boyd left Tuesday by boat for San Francisco where she will visit with her cousin, Mrs. Robert McCully. She will be gone for about two weeks.

Miss Margaret Tucker, who has been visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Peck, and friends in Hillsboro, left for her home in Everett, Washington, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Briggs have sold "The Tigard Inn" at Tigard, and have gone to Coquille, Ore. to visit with Mr. Briggs' parents. From there they expect to go to California for a month's vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Scidmore, ac-companied by Mr. and Ralph Taylor are in Seattle, where they were called upon the death of Mr. Peter-son, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Scidmore. He passed away suddenly last Saturday.

The city has purchased 3 new garbage cans and has had them set in different sections of the town. The City Marshall asks that they be used, especially by the school chil-dren that either carry or buy their lunch in a paper bag and throw it about the streets.

Pacific University won the debate over Oregon State Normal School Tuesday evening. This debate was brought to Beaverton by the Parent-Teachers' Association and for the purpose of giving our high school students a rare opportunity of listening to qualified debaters, and it is to be regretted that no larger audience was present. Local Characters Hold Session To Initiate A New Member

In his mind a lot during the hours preceding the time he was sched-uled to show up at the Rendez-vous, where, as our readers know, the three characters had been meeting.

The first to arrive at the meet-ing was B. Tonian. He always had prided himself on being punc-tual, sometimes to the point of being on hand half an hour ahead of time. On such occasions he would be seen continually taking out his watch and looking at it and remarking that he "did not see why folks can't get around on time. I'm always on time when there is any-thing I go to. It makes me so out of patience to sit around and wait for some slow poke who ain't prob-ably got near as much to keep him at home as what I have."

The next to arrive was W. Cracker who pranced right in and took his seat behind the desk just as though he was the duly elect-ed and official president of the club. He hardly looked at the former ar-rival until he had reached his seat. Then he took off his hat, reached for his handkerchief and meticu-lously proceeded to dust off the chair from which he had arose to leave the meeting on the occasion of their previous gathering.

Gossip bustled in soon, looking first to one side and then to the other. He was making funny little noises in his throat but his mouth was shut tightly, his face wore a determined look and he seemed to make several starts towards the chairs in the room, first stepping towards one up near the desk, then seeming to become self conscious, he retreated to a far corner, finally compromising by sitting in the chair nearest the center of the room. Every one seemed on the anxious seat, watching the door, then looking to the floor, the ceil-ing, out the windows, then again at the floor, now looking at the door and again to the desk behind which Mr. Cracker still occupied his position as chairman of the oc-casion.

Three members were now in the room. All three had come in, taken off his hat and sat down without a word to either of the others. They seemed anxiously waiting for the arrival of some one else, but none of them knew who the others were waiting for. Finally the door opened just a trifle, and all started towards the portal as though to welcome the newcomer with open arms. A Politician stepped into the room. He took off his fine heaver hat, made a sweeping bow which had in it the quality of having been made for each. That is, this simple gesture conveyed to each of the inmates of the room the thought that he was the recipient of a special salutation of obeisance. W. Cracker smiled his tight-lipped lit-tle grin, stiffened his back, straight-ened up in his seat, and immedi-ately became as expansive as a toy balloon. Gossip nodded his head and looked from one to the other of the former inmates of the room. Mr. Tonian's chest expanded visibly and his demeanor told the world that he was ready to forgive every-body anything, even to the extent of being late at this meeting.

Politician sort of slipped into the room, sidled over against the wall, and sat down on the edge of the best seat in the house, where he sat ready to get up at the least sug-gestion of its being the thing to do.

"Do you fellows want to wait till your guests get here, or may we proceed with the business at hand?" W. Cracker propounded the question in his best oratorical manner.

"I dunno what makes you think I'd asked anyone," and Gossip looked his injury.

"I guess I'll proceed to call the meeting to order," and B. Tonian started to advance to take the chair now occupied by Mr. Cracker.
