KINTON SCHOOL NEWS

Those on the honor roll for the past month were: Gwendolyn Holmgren and Hubert Shaver.

A short session of the school was held Monday. An observance of Washington's birthday was carried out with a short program.

Mr. Summers, principal of the school, was compelled to dismiss his room early Friday afternoon, as he was taken with an attack of the flu.

Four new scholars have been added to the school during the past week or so, three in the upper grades, Grace, Thomas and Dean Bowne, and one in the primary grades, Harold Burgess. This brings up the enrollment to 42, 26 in upper grades and 16 in primary.

The second and third grades have subscribed for "My Weekly Reader," a weekly paper published for lower grade work. It deals with current events, geography, health, nature study and community life. The paper is used in class work and the children are examined in the work each week.

Two clubs have been organized lately among the pupils of the school. The sewing club which was organized last year was re-organized again with Mrs. Hudson as leader. The members are as follows: Eunice Snider, Amy Godfrey, Martha Shaver, Pauline Shaver, Loida Tweedy, Eleanor Homrich, Lois Bierly, Mary Hall, Dorothy VanKleeck and Elva Miller.

A health club has been organized with Mrs. Bertha Shaver as leader. The members are as follows: Elmer Bierly, James Holboke, Amy Godfrey, Martha Shaver, Loida Tweedy, Lois Bierly, Orville Bierly, Alice Gembella, Margaret Holboke, James Richards and Dorothy VanKleeck.

Please a Man with Extra Fare
On Leap Year's Extra Day

If you are puzzled at what to do with the extra day we are given this year—February 29th, remember you can do worse than celebrate the year that made the day possible and practice cooking to please a man! Leap Year is supposed to be a time to reach a man's heart and "what every woman knows" is that the way lies through his stomach. Even if you've many things you can do on February 29th, remember that cooking to please the so-called "stronger" sex is always an honorable occupation, and that to add to your repertoire of masculine palate-ticklers is an undertaking devoutly to be praised.

You will have your own list of dishes that your man likes, but adding to it recipes for foods that have already been tried out successfully on other women's husbands makes menu-planning easier. Ignoring the familiar ones, some of the best are presented here.

Perhaps maidens will take a hint from them, too!

MAN-SIZE SANDWICHES

Men like sandwiches into which they can sink their teeth, substantial ones with a meaty flavor. Two of their favorite ingredients, onion and pimiento, are included in this sandwich recipe, popular for men's parties:

1/2 cup dried beef
2 hard-cooked eggs
2 canned pimientos
1 onion
Salad dressing

Cut beef in shreds with scissors. Chop eggs, pimientos, and onion. Add the beef and enough salad dressing to make a paste. Spread on lightly buttered slices of whole wheat or white bread. Eight sandwiches.

CABBAGE A NEW WAY

Raw cabbage, boiled cabbage, corned beef and cabbage have always been eagerly eaten by our life-mates. Now comes a new one, famous recipe of a famous men's club.

Cabbage Au Gratin

1 recipe white sauce
1 small head cabbage
1 2-oz. jar pimientos
1/2 cup buttered crumbs
1/2 cup cheese, diced

Cut the cabbage as for a coarse slaw. Cook in boiling salted water until tender (not more than 10 minutes). Drain. Make a white sauce, then add seasonings and the pimiento (which has been chopped fine). Place layers of cabbage, cheese and sauce in a greased baking dish. Sprinkle buttered crumbs over the top. Brown in a moderately hot oven (375° F.). Makes four to six servings.

A MAN'S DESSERT—PIE

If your man likes mince pie he will like this one better, and certainly you will find it easier to make, with the ready to use fruit peels, candied and sliced in neat little packages.

Spicy Fruit Pie

1/2 cup seeded raisins
1 pkg. sliced citron
1 pkg. sliced candied orange peel
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
2 cups hot water
3 tbsps. cornstarch
1/4 cup cold water
Juice of 1 lemon
2 tbsps. butter

Cook raisins, peel, sugar, spices, and hot water for about 5 minutes. Add cornstarch mixed with cold water. Cook, stirring constantly, about 10 minutes longer. Remove from fire, add lemon juice and butter. Cool, when ready to use pour into pie tin lined with rich pie paste. Cover with strips of pastry and bake on the lower shelf of a hot oven (450° F.) until well browned. (15 to 20 minutes). One large pie.

HELL EAT LETTUCE NOW

Men are apt to leave the salad languishing on the plate. But they like this firm fruit salad which is rolled in the lettuce, and they have to eat their "greens" to get at the filling!

Stuffed Lettuce Salad

1 cup cottage cheese
1/2 pkg. pasteurized dates
1/2 cup nut meats
Salt
Mayonnaise
Lettuce
Pimiento

Mix cheese, sliced dates and chopped nuts with enough mayonnaise to form a paste which can be spread. Add salt if necessary. Spread small lettuce leaves with thick layer of the filling. Starting at base of leaf roll tightly. Slip a narrow strip of canned pimiento around the center of each roll. Place three rolls on a salad plate and serve with additional dressing. 4 to 6 servings.

SCIENCE BATTLES IMPURITIES TO PREVENT DISEASE

1 DISEASES PICKED UP THROUGH BODILY CONTACT WITH FILTH

2 DISEASES PICKED UP THROUGH FOOD & DRINK

3 DISEASES PICKED UP THROUGH AIR WE BREATHE

Modern Sewage Disposal and Personal Cleanliness habits have rid the world of this type of plague

Pure Food Laws and supervised water supplies have done away with contamination from these sources

And now through HOME AIR CONDITIONING science is winning the fight against air-borne infections

CHECK INFECTIONS BY STUDY OF AIR

Home Air-Conditioning Essential Factor in Checking Air-Borne Diseases.

OF THE three main sources of infection from which man is in constant danger of contracting disease, two have been practically controlled in modern civilization. Effective means for protection against the third have only recently been perfected, according to the Holland Institute of Thermology, of Holland, Mich. These sources of disease are the three external divisions of his environment—fifth, with which his eternal body comes in contact; the food and drink he consumes; and the air he breathes.

Such epidemics as the horrible Black Death or the Plague of Justinian, from which people died by the millions in medieval times, were caused by disease of filth carried by the fleas of mice and rats. In those early days of history, little was known of sanitation, so rodents over the land, and the disease-carrying fleas flourished. The disease germs these fleas carried, coming in contact with the bodies of people, spread rapidly to cause the terrible plagues of those times. When people learned to keep their premises and bodies clean, diseases of this nature disappeared.

In more recent times, such diseases as Asiatic cholera and typhoid fever taught mankind the grave menace to the human body in contaminated food and drink. Pure food laws and supervised water supplies have proved effective protection against these sources of infection.

In present times, most diseases resulting from man's contact with his environment are caused by impurities in the air he breathes, especially in the air within his home. Common colds, influenza, pneumonia, and other respiratory infections are the result. Now science is winning the fight against these air-borne infections by home air conditioning, which is the function of the modern warm air heating system. By means of an automatic humidifier, an air propeller unit, thermostatic control, and an air filter, the up-to-date heating plant furnishes an adequate supply of moistened, clean air in motion at comfortable and healthful temperatures in all weather.

Moisture Conserves Home Values, Says Institute

Home values are jeopardized by the damaging results attending the drying out of floors, cornices, moldings, baseboards and other interior woodwork during the winter heating season. Not only are sagging woodwork and wide cracks in floors unsightly, but they markedly affect the resale value of a house.

A most effective way to prevent the damage incident to drying out of interior woodwork and furnishings, is to artificially moisten the home-air during the heating season, says the Holland Institute of Thermology of Holland, Mich. The most efficient devices yet evolved for this purpose are those associated with the heating system itself.

In warm air heating systems of the vapor air type a humidifier with an especially designed evaporating surface receives a constant water supply by direct connection with the water main. It is of ample capacity to evaporate and inject into the home-air, the vapor water from four to six quarts of water per room per day.

This supplies sufficient moisture to prevent the drying-out of interior woodwork, floors and furniture that would occur under ordinary heating conditions. Thus the home heating system by adequately vaporizing the home air tends to protect values by preventing the damage that results when the air is overheated and too dry.

Of greater importance, however, is the fact that a much higher degree of personal comfort is attained with moderate temperatures, if the home air is adequately humidified.

Examine Heater Before Installing Oil Burner

Home owners should not install oil-burner units in their present coal-burning heating systems with the expectation that the new method of heating will overcome any serious deficiencies that characterized past heating plant performance, warns the Holland Institute of Thermology of Holland, Michigan. The heating system should be in A-1 condition else the oil-burner installation will not render the first class service expected of it.
