Just to punch a few holes in the bag of wind that thinks the editor in a little place is the only one of his kind that makes mistakes, here is one from the weather forecast of one of our metropolitan papers. "Much colder weather tomorrow with rising temperature." Then this fellow did not mean to malign the boys who fought in France when he wrote, "A million American boys lie beneath foreign sod."

TIPS FROM A STROLLER

Since the recent educational reorganization in this state the average student in our higher institutions is, truly, "a man without a country." Apprehension has been expressed regarding the eligibility of athletes, but to date no one has become particularly alarmed about the future of many competent instructors. To quote George J. Hecht, publisher of "The Parents," magazine, "Honest desire for educational opportunity meets with the curtailment of school funds, and instead of the expansion and growth which might be expected comes retrenchment and a crippling of the service which the school might offer."

Cannon Ball Baker, premier road racer, predicts a 100 mile speed on our highways within a few years. We wonder how that will mix with the liquor question.

All religious denominations in Jerusalem have united their prayers in an effort to bring rain—maybe we might barter some of our precipitation.

Ripley says "The Old Town Pump" three blocks from the White House in Washington, still gives good water. This should prove encouraging to the Drys in Congress.

A certain lady, a native of Virginia, came to this country some years ago to amass a fortune. When $400 had been saved she became distrustful of American banks and sent it to her native land. Recent efforts to withdraw this amount have disclosed the fact that the deposit has depreciated to such an extent that it will not defray postage on a letter to the U. S. Bankers note—"Misery loves company."

Havana reports the temporary confiscation of a radio station for the purpose of haranguing the government. The parties fled when police were called. Many a weary radio listener in the U. S. would welcome intervention of the law to silence the uncompromising remarks dished out to a "politics-tired" public.

If man sprang from monkey, some of us should be champion broad jumpers, to judge from the facial resemblance.

The mayor of a certain small town in this country has requested the people to institute a recall as an economy measure. According to recent reports the neighboring city of Portland is contemplating recourse to this political weapon—the action of the Oregon metropolitan is not sponsored by any voluntary benevolence of the public officials, however.

Easter bonnets may not have enjoyed their former popularity due largely to financial reasons; nevertheless, the Easter Bunny visited most homes, as prevalent market conditions have placed the humble egg within the reach of the most moderate purse.

Many of us are disappointed to learn that the proverbial Easter Egg Hunt terminates into a struggle to "bring home the bacon."

Nearly 1000 years ago, Leif Ericsson brought the first "male" to our country via Iceland. Now the English may take to the air to deliver the first trans-oceanic mail by that route.

If "Silence is golden", how may account for the death of the silent cinema and the success of the "talkie"?

German police report the capture of counterfeiters with 1,500,000 marks of illegal manufacture in their possession. Even in these days of stupendous war debts, that's quite a mark to shoot at!

The "Hot Stove League" gives way to the training camp, Bridge clubs are transformed into Garden Clubs, and the evening drive supplants the radio program. Despite a gruff attempt to resemble winter, March is smiling on the planting season.

If questioned, my dog might say, "A bone in my dish beats two in the soup."

JOKES

Stranger: "I represent a society for the suppression of profanity. I want to take profanity entirely out of your life and—"

Bright Boy: "Hey mother. Here's a man who wants to buy my car."

Are those eggs fresh? Sh-h! the hen doesn't know we have them yet.

Money to Burn

By Peter B. Kyne

STORY FROM THE START

Hiram Butterworth, miser, decides to leave his fortune to Elmer Clarke, a poor nephew. Butterworth tells Ansel P. Moody, his lawyer, of a deal forty years ago in which he swindled a man out of $10,000 and arranged for payment with interest on the money.

Ninth installment. The author of this tale has figured his sum twice, so he knows the figures are correct. Nellie knew that her figures were not the product of a disordered imagination; she knew that if Hiram Butterworth's estate could afford to pay her that sum, it would, under the definite terms of the will, have to pay her.

Upon completing her computation Nellie went into the vault, ostensibly to put her cash away, but in reality to shed a few briny tears of sympathy for Elmer Butterworth Clarke. Presently she backed up and her practical mind led her to the problem of ascertaining approximately the sum that a rapacious and predatory government would bite out of Elmer's share of the estate.

CHAPTER VI. MEANWHILE Elmer Clarke's final period of service at the Smoke Shoppe was drawing to a close. During that two weeks one incident alone upthrust itself in Elmer's consciousness as a pleasant variation from the orderly procession of morning, noon and night.

On the third day following the great news, the editor of the Tribune fathered a thought truly bold. Remorse for the light manner in which he had once offended Elmer Clarke in his local brevities column now overtook him. What if Elmer should take a notion to back some smart metropolitan journalist in a new Pilarcitos paper and run the Clarion out of business!

Local Doctor Tells Of Progress Made Against Diphtheria. (Continued from front page) Parents were asked to give written permission for the children to have vaccination and the Diphtheria toxin-antitoxin. About 20 children out of an enrollment of 300 were given permission and the work was done by the local physicians.

Parents should also know that not only is it well to vaccinate against small pox and to immunize against diphtheria for the school child but the preschool child between the ages of 6 months and 6 years may also have the same procedure.

The latter part of May those children who have had diphtheria toxin-antitoxin, and those who may have had it several years previously, will have an opportunity to take the Serick test to determine if the toxin-antitoxin has really made the child immune. On children who have not had toxin-antitoxin to the board of that sterling and distinguished citizen, Elmer Butterworth Clarke. The proponents of another candidate to the office, which was without salary, promptly shattering an ancient and well-established custom of electing to the school board only those men and women who had demonstrated their fitness to superintend the education of the young by providing the community with young to educate.

In an indefinite and roundabout way Elmer sensed a covert slam in this. At any rate it aroused all of his new-born antagonism to provincialism. Egged on by his friends, he decided to demonstrate to Pilarcitos that a young unmarried man should, and would, function on that board or know the reason why. Immediately he announced himself as a candidate for the office.

Nellie was delighted, because this evidenced on Elmer's part a subconscious decision to continue to live in Pilarcitos and grow up with the town. She advised him to conduct a furious campaign against the mossbacks of the community, to prove that he had its interests at heart as truly as did his opponent, Henry Tichener, who was the father of twelve children. Indeed, in the midst of her subtle blandishments she suddenly conceived the idea of making Elmer the leading citizen of the county, if not of the state.

In one illuminating instant she caught a vision that caused her to tremble. As the sole proprietor of Elmer's place, she knew her man couldn't be elected town dog catcher, but as president of the Pilarcitos Commercial Trust and Savings bank she could elect him mayor at the primary election. From mayor to the state legislature, from the state legislature to lieutenant governor, from that to governor, to congressman, to United States senator, to the Vice Presidency—to the White House!

With difficulty she repressed a cheer. "I'll open my bank with a hundred thousand dollars capital, fully paid up. I'll start with my own deposit of at least four hundred thousand dollars and I'll become a member of the Federal Reserve bank, which no banker in this town has sense enough to become. I'll take over every loan Ansel Moody has as it falls due. I'll cut the interest rate on those two bloodsuckers and I'll lend money on honesty, ability and industry; in the long run I'll consolidate the other two banks in this town with mine—I mean Elmer's and mine. Oh, Elmer darling, you're playing into my hand, and that means you'll wear out your life, not drag it out and rot it out! And nobody shall ever know who put up the money!"

At their next meeting, after incalculating in Elmer such a sense of power as he had never known before, Nellie adroitly shifted the conversation to a subject which is never very far from pleasing to nine men out of ten, to wit, himself. "Dearie," she charged suddenly, "do you know that suit you're wearing is beginning to look just a little bit shabby? I don't like to see my Elmer letting himself go like this. You should be the best dressed man in town—and usually you are. I'm afraid you've been trying too hard to save money to equip Elmer's place." He squeezed her hand gratefully. "The idea of that business of my own obsessed me, Nellie," he admitted. "I have been scrimping more than usual lately. I wanted to get going—to be independent and make enough money to enable me to marry you and give you everything you desired."

"But darling—I would have married you on far less. I would have been a help to you, not a source of expense." "I know it, old loveable. But you were doing as well in your job as I was doing in mine, and it isn't a particularly striking evidence of unselfishness when a man asks a woman to give up financial independence to scruple and save and sacrifice with him. I didn't want you to do that. My mother had to do that all her life and it hurt me. I swore that when I married, my wife should never have to say to me, 'Elmer, dear, may I have a dollar and a half to pay the gas bill' or 'Elmer, I'd like eight dollars to buy a new hat.'"

"Never fear, Nellie. I will be a grateful subject. I want you to have your own private checking account and I never want to know what you do with the money." "I will—If you'll take it with me." "I shall not. On a vacation I'd be a nuisance. You'd be working hard just trying to assure yourself that your wife was having a wonderful time—and I'm not ready to marry you yet, dear. Really, you must not bother yourself with a wife and her trunks and bags, not to mention your own."

"Sure you can't be persuaded to change your mind and marry me before I go, Nellie?" "Elmer Clarke, I'm not even engaged to you—yet. Remember that, I have already explained to you why."

"You're a mean woman, but I love you, so I suppose all of my life I'll be giving you your own way about everything. The only comfort I'll draw out of that will be the knowledge that you're wiser than a tree full of owls and probably know more about everything than I do." "Omit the compliments, Mr. Clarke, please. Are you going on that vacation?" "Yes—after I've cleaned up Henry Tichener in this school election. By the way, Nellie, I've made one new resolution since that lawyer, McPeake, wired me I was a millionaire. I've decided not to cook my own breakfast hereafter and to refrain from eating my luncheons and dinners in restaurants. I've engaged a smart gentleman of color to look after me and the dogs. His name is Jasper and he swings a mean skillet; he can handle, drive a car and play the banjo."

"Good! Elmer, I think you ought to buy yourself another nice present. You've been good for ever so long and you deserve it. You'll want a new house, of course. If you intend to remain in Pilarcitos long enough to complete your term of office as chairman and member of the board of trustees of the Elmer Butterworth school, you want for your bungalow and lot?" "Ten thousand dollars. Get a customer for me, Nellie!"

"Yes, but I'm afraid my customer cannot meet your terms. I know a party who might be induced to buy your house if you will accept two thousand dollars down, with a first mortgage for two years on the remainder at seven per cent." "Sold." The word popped out of Elmer's mouth in much the same manner he formerly employed when giving orders to his patron. "I suppose you'll want a commission, Nellie," he suggested with what Ansel Moody would have termed ill-concealed humorosity. "Not from you," she replied breathlessly. They were lunching at the time in a booth at the Palace grill. Nellie glanced around, saw that for the moment they were unobserved, "Kiss me!" she commanded fiercely. Elmer dutifully obeyed. "Now go forth and make your fight for school trustees," Nellie ordered. "See to it that you win. If you're defeated I'll cry."

Estelle Goes A-Baking

OUT in Hollywood they tell you that Estelle Taylor can cook and bake as well as she can act, which for the movie fan has only one meaning. Estelle must be a good cook. Her special weakness is pie—large fresh fruit pie containing plenty of vitamins and sugar with its energy giving qualities. After coming back for a second helping, movie folk have generally agreed with Estelle that nothing can "take the place of something sweet to make the meal complete. Here's one of Miss Taylor's tempting recipes for an apple pie which is different: Hollywood Apple Pie Make two crisp pie shells and fill one with cold, well sweetened and seasoned apple sauce. Then place the other shell on top and bake in sections with a spoonful of whipped cream for decoration. A nice nutmeg sprinkled on top will add to the flavor.

Local Doctor Tells Of Progress Made Against Diphtheria

(Continued from front page) Parents were asked to give written permission for the children to have vaccination and the Diphtheria toxin-antitoxin. About 20 children out of an enrollment of 300 were given permission and the work was done by the local physicians. A very small charge was made for the serum which amounted to $1.00 for the Diphtheria toxin-antitoxin and 50c for the Small Pox vaccine. Next year the local physicians will give the community the same opportunity that was given this year and it is hoped that more children may become immunized. Next year it may be possible to induce the school board to pay for the serum and there will be no cost to anyone.
