Song of the dollar: "I Wonder Who's Hoarding Me Now?"

Wall Street was made from a cow-path. Now it's where the lambs gambel.

Our modern civilization hinges between the cross and the double-cross.

The dries made Prohibition a moral issue. The bootleggers have kept it one.

A college diploma is all right until you try to put it up as collateral for a loan.

Here lies the body of Bully A. Head He didn't do what the stop-sign said.

War is about the only thing you can get into by paying the price of admission after the show is over.

The sailor that had a sweetheart in every port now has a son that is a truck driver with one at every hot-dog stand.

Butler: "Did you ring, sir?" Baron: "Yes. Just stay and listen to my friend's golf story. I am going to bed."

Enacting some of the appropriation bills by Congress amounts to the same thing as writing a check to pay an overdraft.

A Los Angeles man has instituted a search for his mother-in-law. This is the hottest news since the last man bit the last dog.

Sergeant: "But you say you're a college student?" Prisoner: "I am, sir."

Officer: "But he can't be! I've searched him and there ain't a single magazine subscription blank on him."

Not 'Arf Bad "Artford, 'Artford," called out the conductor. "You've dropped an 'a,'" said a passenger.

"That's all right, sir; we'll pick it up at Hamherst."

Ideal Mater Two college girls were having lunch together. "My dear," said one, "why do you always call your mother 'the mater'?"

"Because," answered the other girl, "she managed to find husbands for all my seven sisters."

Misunderstood At last the disgraceful rumor had been traced to its source, and the cook was confronted by a provoked mistress.

"I was only repeatin', mum, what I heard from your own lips," the cook asserted.

"Gracious!" shrieked the mistress, "do you mean to say I told you my husband was in jail?"

"Not in so many words," conceded the cook, "but I drew my own conclusions. You said you was going to have a coming-out party in the summer."

IN OREGON HOMES

Roberts—"When mixing pastry for pies, I make enough to do for several bakings," states a Crook county homemaker. "I put it in a stone jar and store it in a cool place. Then when I am ready to bake pies I moisten the amount needed. This plan saves a lot of time when I have harvest hands to cook for. Incidentally, the wire pastry mixer is a big help too. As compared with the old way, it takes only half the time to cut in the shortening."

Eugene—Not only are the 111 home garden co-operators in the Mosby Creek, Latham, Pleasant Hill and Wendling communities rotating their crops but they are experimenting with raising three new ones. These crops are John Bar tomatoes, Calabrese sprouting broccoli, and Carolina Sieva beans. This year-round project is conducted jointly by Gertrude Skow, home demonstration agent, O. S. Fletcher, agricultural agent, and A. G. F. Bouquet, professor of vegetable crops at the state college.

Corvallis—If you have invited a crowd for a picnic supper with the family or if your club is planning an outdoor meeting, then a supply of "Quantity Recipes for Picnics" will come in handy. Believe home economist Melissa Hunter, head of institution economics at Oregon State college, has assembled some favorite recipes with ingredients enough to serve 25 persons. These include such dishes as tamales, Philadelphia relish, chicken and noodles, potato salad, minced ham filling for sandwiches, vegetable salad and coffee. The mimeographed sheets are available through county extension offices or may be obtained from the home economics office of the extension service, Corvallis.

The Everlasting Whisper

Mark nodded an emphatic approval. Words, which Ben perhaps looked for, he did not add. Everything had been said in the one word "congratulate."

King followed his host. He would shake hands, say a dozen stupid words, eyes and the warm dusky tan of face and hands—even the effect of the careless, worn boots and the muscular throat showing through an open shirt collar—put a delicious little shiver of excitement into her.

They were all of Gloria's "set" with one noteworthy exception. Him she called "Mr. Gratton" while the others were Archie and Teddy and Georgia and Evelyn and Connie. It was to this "Mr. Gratton" that she turned, having made a piquant face at the dejected college youth.

Once, while under the pretext of letting their horses blow, King had suggested a short halt to give the girl a chance to rest. Gloria said with abruptness: "What do you think of Mr. Gratton?"

Already she knew Mark King well enough to realize that he would speak his mind without beating about the bush. "I don't like him," said King.

"Neither do I," she said. "Not up here in the mountains. And down in San Francisco I thought him rather splendid. What is more, if we were whisked back to San Francisco this minute, I'd probably think him fine again."

She appeared interested in the consideration and when they rode on was silent, obviously turning the matter over and over in mind.

"What's the chance with Gus Ingle's 'Secret' this year, Mr. King?" he demanded slyly.

"What do you know about it?" he said sharply. "And who has been talking to you?"

"But, my darling daughter," gasped Mrs. Gaynor. "You don't in the least understand what you are about! What in the world was Mark King thinking of?"

"What do you suppose?" said Gloria tranquilly. "He would have been very rude if he hadn't been thinking of your daughter. Besides, he had very little to do with the matter."

"But you will be gone all day!" "Oh, mamma!" Gloria began to grow impatient. "What if I am? Mr. King is a gentleman, isn't he? He isn't going to eat me, is he? Why do you make such a fuss over it all? Do you want to spoil everything for me?"

"You know I don't! But—"

"I told you, I should have left you a note and slipped it to the door."

And while Mrs. Gaynor stared after her she closed the door softly and went tip-toeing down stairs and out into the brightening dawn, where Mark King awaited her with the horses.

From behind a window curtain Gloria's mother watched the girl tripping away through the meadow to the stable, set back among the trees. King little laugh had in it a flutter of excitement as her cavalier's strength took her by delighted surprise and off her feet. They rode away through the thinning shadows. Mrs. Gaynor, despite the earliness of the hour, went Marshfield—Ground shell to be used as agricultural lime is now available at the dock here at $5 per ton which is well under the price of ground limestone shipped in. Local men interested in agricultural development assisted by County Agent George H. Jenkins have carried this project through from a mere idea to a successful cooperative industry in which sea shells are dredged from the bay ground and sold direct to farmers.

Tillamook—Many farmers here are showing increased interest in irrigation for certain crops. The present general opinion is that the flooding or strip border method of applying water is impractical here, though County Agent Bergstrom is arranging for a demonstration of this if possible to check further on its possibilities. The over-head sprinkler system has proved successful on two farms, though it is more expensive to install.

Bids were received July 22 for the construction of a bridge over Yachats River about eight miles east of the town of Yachats.
