Beaverton Loses To University High Squad

Long Pass Of About Forty Yards Leads To Touchdown For Eugene

GOOD GAME PLAYED

Clement and Barron Injured In the First Part of the Game

While they came home with the short end of a 14-9 score, the Beaverton high school squad came home feeling that they should be congratulated on the showing made. Confronted with a much heavier team, stiff from the long ride of 140 miles, and probably suffering just a little stage fright, they were out played at the start.

Recovering from their condition they took the University High team of Eugene into their own territory and held them there throughout the last half, four times having the ball almost to the goal line only to have the heavier line hold and to loose the ball at the critical moment.

Defeated by the swiftly charging backs of the Beaverton squad, the University team resorted to the aerial route and threw a long pass, some forty or forty-five yards. A Beaverton end just ticked the ball with his finger tips but could not bring it down. This long pass resulted in giving the University high the winning score only for that what could have been called a fluke play, Leaverton had them kicked, 9-8.

Today the team meets the Tigers of Tigard, on the Beaverton field. This field would hold many more spectators than have shown up to any game yet this year. Why not try to fill up the available space and watch your team in action? It'll do you good.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO BEGIN SOON

Portland, Oregon, October 11. Early November brings a festival season for music lovers. It means concerts by the Portland Symphony Orchestra will begin again--concerts that combine the old and the new, for it is ever the thought of Mr. William van Hoogstraten, conductor to present on each program one of the best-known masterpieces and also to introduce his audience to some work that is now in the orchestra's repertoire.

The 1932-33 season promises to be a banner one. Into the 14 concerts instead of 18 given last year will go Mr. van Hoogstraten's most careful and choice selections, for he is determined that though the season must necessarily be shortened it shall not suffer in excellence. It should be a banner year then for its quality, and also from the pocketbook standpoint of those who attend. Prices are lower than ever, and that actually means more for one's money.

Buying a season ticket to either of the series offered is an investment in the finest of musical entertainment, and at the same time it lists the purchaser as a subscriber and supporter of the Portland Symphony society, under whose management the orchestra presents its concerts. The two series are eight Monday night programs, beginning November 7, and six Sunday matinees, starting November 13. Together they cover a period of 14 weeks, closing in February.

"When one considers that each concert gives the listener the work of the greatest composers, played by 70 skilled musicians, it is hard to realize that the season ticket prices can be so low," states Charles E. McCulloch, general chairman for the current season.

SPELLING CONTEST

Second Grade Memorizes Poem Named "The Little Elf"

The Beaverton grade school library has become an attractive place to visit. Professional book binders worked several days last week repairing library books for the school district. The reconditioned books are much more clean and attractive and will last several years longer. About 250 books were repaired.

All grade children have now been weighed and measured. On Wednesday they will receive health inspection by Dr. Mason, assisted by Dr. Welsh and Dr. Talbert. This inspection is done every year so that parents may know how their children stand in the very important matter of health, without cost to themselves. Special attention is given to eye and ear defects that may interfere with the child's progress in school work. This information is also an aid to the county nurse in her attempt to help school children.

The seventh grade still maintains its record of perfect attendance thus far. There are twenty-one days to their credit now.

The seventh grade is now stressing correct methods of study. Students are learning to select for themselves the important points in their lessons.

Dorothy Pritzloff's side is leading in the spelling contest in the eighth grade with 263 points. Thelma Grette's side has 243 points.

Third grade pupils are also determined to become good spellers. Everyone is trying to win a gold star this week and improve last week's record of only three stars.

Proving subtraction problems is a very interesting game these pupils have been learning.

The sixth grade had some most distinguished visitors last week. They were early explorers who, in the form of pupils, told their experiences to the class. This required some hard study to be able to tell the adventure correctly.

Next week the class is expecting a visit from Captains Lewis and Clark. Two boys will impersonate the famous explorers. This grade reports fourteen days of perfect attendance.

Anyone desiring information on the British Isles should ask the sixth grade pupils. They have just completed a study of the geography of these islands.

Last Friday was Calvin Nees's sixth birthday. The birthday cake on the blackboard was enjoyed as much as a real cake. Mrs. Nees sent candy suckers for each boy and girl. This was the first grade's first party.

Each child in Mrs. Lowell's room has a Halloween "stand up" on his desk. Anyone who is a "goop" must forfeit his "stand up". All are trying hard to keep theirs until Halloween, when they will be allowed to take them home.

Henry Jones has been absent for two days on account of illness.

Visitors to the first grade during the week were Mrs. C. B. Nees, Mrs. J. G. Hohnstein and Mrs. Fred Pentz.

"The Little Elf" is the title of a poem learned by the second grade. Pictures that illustrate the poem have made it very real. Marjorie Ann Knight and Ronald Graham have entered the second grade. Richard Lincoln is a new pupil in the fourth.

Pupils in room 4 are grateful to Miss Davies for a large number of plants that brighten the school room. They are also greatly pleased to welcome Agnes Wegener back, after a brief absence due to an automobile accident. Virginia Wegener is improving from the same accident, and may return to school by the middle of next week.

A number of grade school students enjoyed the operetta at the High School, presented by the Glee Club on Wednesday.

DENNEY ASSISTS IN PLANTING OF TROUT

R. B. Denney, secretary of the Washington Co. Red and Gon Club, has been assisting the State Game Commission in planting cut-throat trout in the streams of Washington County, the last ten days, 25,000 fish have been planted in each of the following streams, Patton, Gales, Scoggins, East Dairy McKay. Approximately 90,000 fish were planted in these streams last spring and it is expected that a considerable number will be added to these numbers during the next three or four months. It is very gratifying to the fishermen to note these plantings as it will in time make fishing a real sport.
