Man Wears Iron Collar

I am the man. I wear the iron collar. Another owns me, body and soul. I live to do what he bids me. He tells me to go and I go. To come and I come. I have no rights of my own. I live my days, his slave

And who is this one that owns me?

Step close now and spell out his name on the collar. Yes, that's right; it's "The Lord Jesus Christ." Can't you hear the great Apostle, St. Paul, say this as he calls himself Christ's slave? "You are bought with a price; with the blood of Christ, so He has power over you."

Two kinds of Christians—those who still travel with the world; restless, joyless, powerless. And then the surrendered ones who wear the iron collar.
